Want a Job? . . .

Many job opportunities for university students interested in post-graduation employment are being passed by because of the absence of a centralized employment agency on the campus.

In spite of the excellent opportunities offered to veterans by the well-organized veteran's administration office, available positions for other students are not recognized.

Letters sent from firms throughout the country to professors of the various departments, request applications from students interested in employment following graduation.

Professors usually do not have time to explain these letters and possibilities of the proposed jobs to all their classes. Often students in other colleges might be interested in a job prospect connected with the business administration department, while business administration students might be looking for job opportunities in another college.

An organized student employment agency on the campus could catalogue job openings for students and also types of positions desired by students. If the university administration is not able to establish such an agency, perhaps one of the student organizations on campus would be willing to support the project. Professors would undoubtedly be willing to offer their suggestions and turn over any job-prospects to the organization.

With graduation not too far away, the majority of seniors are definitely seeking employment for next fall and would find a university employment agency valuable.

A ski school has been started at the University of New Mexico. Students in the school will study the art of skiing at La Madera Ski Area in the Sandia mountains. The school is under the direction of James L. McNamara, who helped found the American ski troops during the war. Several ski champions and experts will be instructors.

The University of Missouri Workshop has lone one medium-sized black cat named Elizabeth with theatrical aspirations. Liz had been assigned a role in the Workshop production, "I Remember Mama," but she grew temperamental and escaped from the office, apparently through a transom. The president of the Workshop says that Elizabeth is just too young to be out in the world alone, and besides that, she is needed in the play. It seems, the president stated, that the theater went to her head, and lately she has refused to play with her balls of thread and yarn and has insisted on posing for publicity stills. The Workshop staff has printed a plea in the Missouri Student that if any student should see a cat doing the sleep-walking scene from Macbeth, to please return her to the Workshop. After all, the show must go on.

Students on the University of California campus who are members of the baby-sitters' profession learn many interesting things about the children of university professors. One sitter discovered that the children of one Nobel prize winner are already showing sparks of their father's genius. Recently they performed a masterful job of absconding with a whole cake which their mother had carefully prepared for guests.

The first man on ice for 1946 at Iowa State was an engineering freshman, Richard Metier, who went skating last Monday afternoon despite warnings by college sports officials that the ice was still too thin. Strangely enough, though, he didn't fall through the ice. Campus sports officials stated that they really don't want to interfere with campus fun, but they still believe that the ice is too thin, at least to support all of the skating enthusiasts who are waiting for chances to show their skill. They insist that students had better wait until they see the blue flag signifying safe ice before they begin indulging in the sport.

Directory Phone Numbers, Ads Arouse Keen Interest

By Eugene Berman.

"Student and Faculty Directory of the University of Nebraska for the Year 1946-1947" has reached the hands of the anxiously awaiting public, who like the fictional characters Prunella and Gillan, are in the hopes of being able to scan its columns in search of names and telephone numbers for possible dates.

It is people of this small caliber who have raised the demand that a picture and a complete physical and social description of every student be printed in all the following directories. When asked what a social description would consist of, Gillan spouted, "whether a girl has any mode of transportation available to her, and whether a girl."

Worthy Aspects.

There are many aspects of the directory that arouse interest and are certainly worthy of note. There is the student who caught only a brief glance of the book's cover and said, "Good, now I can find where Molotov goes when he walks out of the Security Council."

Of course the student was misled by the title, "Directory of U N," but stories such as this are not worth getting excited about, for they date back to early last spring when the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce, realizing that the rest of the world did exist, offered the Coliseum of the university for the permanent meeting place of the United Nations, "for," said the Chamber of Commerce's correspondence, "the building already has a large, illuminated U. N. on it, which is a feature that almost no other place in the world can offer, with the exception of the University of Nicaragua."

Getting back to the directory... another amazing feature of the address book that has been compiled at the cost of someone else's "blood, sweat, and tears" is the presence of almost innumerable advertisements for the Davis School Service, whose motto is, "During the last 28 years our teacher placement service has had the patronage of thousands of Nebraska University trained teachers."

Competitive Ads.

The ads in this publication are definitely worthy of comment, especially the Earl Wood Dairy Store ads. The competition between stores 1 to 15 is really keen, and it is difficult to decide which one to patronize. Even "Da Rag" comes thru with an advertisement in this publication. Yes, the Daily Nebraskan offers their classified columns to anyone who wishes to locate his girl.

Barbara, Connie, Berniece, Hortense, Sally, or John, Milt, George, Hal, Bob... they are all in the new directory and can be obtained for four bits in the Union lobby. It's not a bad investment for a rainy day!

John Lund, who is Betty Hutton's romantic interest in "The Perils of Pauline," once sold novelties by mail order from Rochester, N. Y., before he turned actor.

Students Obtain Influenza Shots At Health Service

Influenza immunization on a cost basis is still available to all students, veterans' wives, faculty, faculty families, and other university personnel at the Student Health Service from 8 a. m. to 12 and 1 to 5 p. m. daily.

Ag college students may secure this service at the City Campus Clinic or at the Ag Clinic in the Activities building from 8 to 8:45 a. m. and 1 to 2 p. m. Tuesday through Friday.

Several hundred students, mostly veterans, have already been immunized.
