

HUSKER HIGHLIGHTS

By George Miller

Tying together a few loose ends before plunging into semester exams:

While the Nebraska indoor track team has been working out in the steam-heated east stadium layout another Big Six team has not been faring quite as well. Coach Ward Haylett has been drilling his Kansas State cindermen outside due to a construction project which has taken over the indoor facilities at Manhattan. A new indoor layout is under construction but until that time the Wildcats will be forced to rely on mild winter weather.

Just wait until the outdoor season gets started, say the K-Staters.

Reports brought back from the Colorado trip by members of the Nebraska wrestling team indicate that the altitude in Denver and Greeley bothered the Scarlet boned-benders during their bouts with Denver University and Colorado State teams.

Just a word of warning to the grapplers: The Kansas State B team took care of the Wichita University mat squad by a 17-8 score last week. The Wildkittens won every bout except the heavy-weight and 136 pound tussles, while the 121-pound bout was a draw.

Although most Cornhusker athletic teams will be marking time during exam week, Coach Hollie Lepley's varsity swimming team will make its first start on Saturday, January 25, against the University of Minnesota at the coliseum pool.

Something of a reciprocal trade agreement seems to have been arranged between Missouri and Purdue. Bill Bangert, one-time Big Six shot and discus champion, transferred his allegiance to the Big Nine school last year, and this season the Missouri track team has come up with Nels Klaus who won points for the Boilermaker team last season in the same events.

A pair of Big Six coaches have been named to rules committee posts on the National Collegiate Athletic Association. Bruce Drake, Oklahoma basketball coach, replaces George Edwards of Missouri as the fifth district representative on the basketball panel, while Jack McGuire, Iowa State swimming coach, represents the district on the swimming rules committee.

Husker athletic followers will have their heads spinning when the second semester athletic schedule gets underway. A far cry from the wartime days, Nebraska teams will be engaged in intercollegiate competition in varsity and Nubbin basketball, indoor track, gymnastics, wrestling and swimming.

The Iowa State intramural office has worked out a novel way of timing intramural basketball games. With 140 teams engaged in competition, Director Harry Schmidt has been faced with a shortage of timer's watches. To remedy the difficulty he has established a klaxon horn in the center of the gym and starts and ends four games at the same time.

Individual games may be halted for timeouts and substitutions, but the master timer ends all games after 35 minutes, no matter how many delays may have occurred in individual contests.

To take care of the problem for Husker intramural teams, Director Lou Means has established a system whereby the clock is never stopped during the game and all timeouts reduced the actual playing time. This eliminates disputes about stopping and starting the clock.

Mel Williams Tops Nubbins Scorers

Compilation of Nubbins basketball statistics reveals that Mel Williams, forward, is leading the second string cagers in points scored with 28 to his credit. Williams also leads in field goals, with eleven, and is tied with Bob Robison and Matt Keating in the matter of free throws made, each having sunk six.

Rounding out the first eight scorers are Bob Robison with 24; Thurman Wright with 21; Anton Lawry, Bernie Bieterman, Fred Simpson, and Don Bauer with 19, and Dick Srb with 18.

Sigma Chi Quint Raps Wesleyan B

(Held over from Saturday's edition.)

The Sigma Chi fraternity quintet ran over the Wesleyan B team by a 60-30 count Friday night in the preliminary contest before the Wesleyan-Wayne encounter.

Bus Whitehead and Jim McWilliams, a pair of Scottsbluff hotshots, paced the Sigma Chi team with 21 and 19 points, respectively.
