A Summary . . .

Since the conclusion of the series of articles on the budget prepared for the Daily Nebraskan by Bruce Nicoll of the Public Relations office, most students interested in the university should have a good idea of what the Regent's budget asks for and how the money, if appropriated, will be spent.

As a summary of the information presented in the four stories, the requested budget looks like this:

$6,500,000 is asked from state tax funds for the university. The remainder of the $10,103,194 needed to run the school for the next two years comes from student fees, federal funds and endowment income. The tax funds requested represent 65% of the revenue necessary and it is this figure which was cut in Governor Peterson's budget recommendation.

Of the $10,103,194, approximately one-half will be spent on teaching requirements, hiring new employees, increasing salaries of present staff members and securing readers, laboratory assistants and clerical employees to help the faculty.

Since the income excluding tax funds comes from fixed items of fees and endowments, these requested taxes are the crux of the budget.

Another bill before the legislature is the Mueller bill, which will provide the university with $8,000,000 for buildings over a 10 year period, if it is passed.

It was with the hope of clarifying the budget requests for the students and particularly for their parents, because they are the voters of the state and therefore have a double interest in the welfare of the educational institutions in Nebraska, that the Daily published the budget series.
