

YM Seminar Filings Open To Students

Univ. YMCA urges students to apply for the Student Industrial Seminar to be held in Minneapolis-St. Paul, June 15-Aug. 23 according to secretary, Mildred Taylor.

Applications may be secured from Miss Taylor and Gordon Lippitt. The deadline for application is May 15, with early applications receiving prior consideration.

The Seminar, now in its third year, includes men and women college students who want to understand the complexities of an industrial community and who want to know how to work out its problems. Students are employed fulltime in Twin Cities industrial firms at standard pay rates. They live in a college dorm and participate in three informal study sessions, trips, talks, and other activities each week. Students are given aid in securing their employment.

The project, which is sponsored by the National Student Councils of the YM and YW, has openings for both men and women students regardless of race or creed. Clarence Elliott, North Central Area Student Secretary of the YMCA will serve as director of the project.

A freshman sociology course on dating started last week at Bowling Green University. Dr. Samuel Lowrie, chairman of the sociology department and teacher, says he believes this is the first time any college has offered a credit course devoted primarily to dating. He believes that communities should organize to encourage dating. He considers it a normal element in social development, and a large factor in the personality growth of the individual. He is writing a textbook on dating problems and encouraging the establishment of similar courses in other universities.

Walter.

Walter, a one-pound pigeon, is the current pride of the Indiana University psychology department. With his beak Walter plays four differently colored keys which play a tune. When he plays seven notes in proper sequence, he is rewarded by a bag of seed. Walter is under study of such behavioral processes as learning, punishment, motivation and discrimination.

Expenses.

The average coed spends about $298 for her wardrobe each year, according to an inventory conducted in a home ec class at Macalester (St. Paul, Minn.) College. Survey results showed that the average investment for an entire wardrobe, including clothes from previous years, totaled about $974.

Sweaters were the most popular costume preferred by the coeds, each of whom owned from five to 20. Coeds owned from four to 22 pairs of shoes.

Syracuse.

"The Borscht & Potatoes" is a newly-formed literary society made up of students interested in all types of writing at Syracuse University. Despite its title, the society is "a serious endeavor" and members are considering publishing an anthology of the best works of its members.

Joe College being the wheel is the greatest threat to public safety on the road, according to an Associated College Press dispatch released last week. Insurance companies, ACP reported, shy away from college men who drive cars to school. One underwriter told a Washington University student, "I know you collegians, you speed madly, habitually in an alcoholic fog, ogling pretty girls, pleading fenders, and running down sweet old grandmothers, just for the sport of it."

The University of Miami is engaging in a genuine campus beautification program. Now under construction is a 7 1/2 acre man-made lake which will be surrounded by a student union building, soda shop, band shell and dance patio.

ence, and one of these was the scene with Lady Macbeth after he had murdered Duncan.

Blanche Duckworth, as Lady Macbeth, played her role with a great deal of eloquence, but she lacked the variety of vocal pitch to make Lady Macbeth as bold and as resolute as she temporarily is. Force could not do it alone. The sleep walking scene showed Miss Duckworth at her best, and the audience, which was gradually becoming restless after too long a sitting, quieted to hear her reveal her self-betraying thoughts while in troubled sleep.

Dean Graunke, as Banquo, proved himself to be the best Shakespearean actor on the stage. His lines were delivered with ease and fullness of voice and action, suitable to his interpretation. Only on one incident, was Graunke's performance not convincing. When stabbed by one of the three, beastly murderers, Graunke's fall to the ground was done far too smoothly to convince the audience that a knife blade between the ribs was the cause of it all.

Playing a drunken porter, Dave Andrews easily stole his particular scene. His lines were incidental, his tottering, though nimble, walk up and down the stage, mildly threatened to stop the show.

Donald Hall as Duncan, the King of Scotland, had the appropriate mellowness and age of voice suitable to the character, but his speeches were often muffled, and as a consequence the audience missed the lines.

Jack Wenstrand as MacDuff and Joe Moore as Malcolm both showed the power and conviction of their parts. Wenstrand held his audience intently with the lines that followed his being informed that his wife and child are killed.
