What Is the NSO?

Since the turn of the year, The Daily Nebraskan office has been deluged with literature from a newly formed student organization calling itself the NSO, or National Student Organization. Filled with high sounding ideas and ideals, this literature has been on the increase during the past month, informing your newspaper that there will be a constitutional convention in Madison, Wisconsin, from August 30 to September 8 for the purpose of drawing up a definite constitution under which the group can function.

We feel that this deluge is all very well, and we admit that some of the facts and figures published have been highly valuable. But we do not believe that the propaganda issuing from Chicago, where the organization's temporary headquarters are located, has been sufficiently detailed and exact for thinking students to decide whether the NSO is a worthy group, or for that matter, to decide what the NSO is.

Therefore, we do not feel that the Student Council should be judged too harshly for its attitude toward the organization. Rather, we congratulate the council for its reticence in not wishing to jump into something blindfolded.

However, we advocate active support for the National Student Organization up to and including the Madison convention. In this manner, it should be possible for the council, and the university as a whole, to inform themselves more completely on what we hope is a good thing. To be perfectly fair, which we are sure the council desires, a complete delegation should be sent to the Constitutional Convention with instructions to ascertain the exact and concrete aims of this new combination. With that information, there is a good chance that the university can find out whether the NSO is worthy of its support and proceed in a fitting manner with clear conscience.

Council Corner

by Sam Warren

Student Council meeting was marked by routine matters for a change, last Wednesday, rather than by anything unusual. Reports, presentation of bills, and formation of a new committee were the order of the day.

Ned Raun, Judiciary Committee chairman, recommended that the Council approve the constitution of the Nebraska Pre-Law Association. Because the standing Constitutions Committee has not been formed for the new year, the Judiciary Committee was asked to serve in that capacity. The pre-law association is a social group to foster interest in the field of law and to acquaint pre-law students with the requirements and interests of the field.

The National Student Cooperation committee was authorized to appoint up to four delegates to the regional NSO conference at Augustana College, in South Dakota. Eugene Berman is chairman of the region. The Council voted to pay conference registration fees for whatever delegates would be chosen on Friday following the council meeting. Dorothy Lasher and Sally Irvn were appointed. The committee will meet tomorrow at 9 a. m. to choose delegates to the International Student Service in Denmark and to the NSO constitutional convention in Wisconsin, both to be held this summer.

Dale Ball, bizad representative, was named chairman of the new Campus Improvement Committee. Not a committee on campus beautification, it is a committee formed to seek out needed campus projects that might not otherwise come to the Council's attention, and to coordinate worthwhile projects among campus activity organizations.

The only lively note in the meeting was treasurer Arlis Swanson's presentation of a $4.98 bill submitted by the Innocents Society for ballot printing, accompanied by her statement that she would not recommend payment of the bill. "I see no reason why we should pay the Innocents' bills, she said, "just because we were good enough to run the polls for them." Jean Compton added that Mortar Board, "a similar organization," does not ask the Council to defray costs of its ballot printing. The bill will be forwarded to the Innocents Society.

Stanley Johnson presented a $17.50 bill to the Council for the Men's Activity Point Board, for which $30 was added to the Council budget from administration funds. The bill was approved. As newly-tapped president of Innocents, Johnson automatically becomes chairman of the point board.

Air Unit Plans Guard Training Camp in August

Nebraska's National Guard Air Unit, the 173rd Fighter Squadron, has announced that it will hold summer camp for former service personnel from August 9 to 23.

The dates chosen immediately follow the long session of summer school, and were selected in order not to interfere with vacations and class schedules of guardsmen now attending the university.

Equipment

During the two weeks camping period, men will be familiarized with modern Air Force Equipment, and those trainees who qualify will be entitled to draw two weeks pay in Grade.

Additional information may be obtained at a meeting Monday night, May 12, at 7:30 in Hangar 1 of the Air Base. Free transportation will leave the north door of the post office building at 7.

Alums To Hear Former Athlete Speak at Lunch

Mrs. Schoepel, who will be in Lincoln with her husband for the affair, is a former Nebraska student, and three of Schoepel's sisters have attended the university. Schoepel himself played football here in 1920, '21 and '22. He is now practicing law in Wichita.

from the feminine view - by B.J. Hedonah

The feminine view this week turns to the well-dressed college man who chooses a beautiful WILSON BROTHERS sport shirt and HARVEY BROTHERS gabardine slacks. By a skillful and unique method of blending, the strength and durability of fine wool and the comfort of spun rayon have been perfectly united in the beautiful material, Kohinoor, from which the shirt is fashioned. As a result Kohinoor has unusual beauty of texture and tailors into a shirt you are proud to own. Most important, thanks to a new finishing technique, it is the first wool blend ever to be vat dyed and Sanforized... meaning you can now own a sport shirt that will look brand new after each washing... stop in today at 1230 O Street for a WILSON BROTHERS Kohinoor shirt.

To complete this good looking profile, choose a contrasting color in a pair of fine quality gabardine slacks from the large assortment HARVEY BROTHERS have to offer.
