A Misunderstanding . . .

Apologies to the band! Although we contend that band members read into Wednesday's editorial more than what was actually there, which is understandable, we want to make a further explanation.

The purpose of the editorial was not to criticize the band in any way but merely to suggest something it might do to eliven spirit at the games. What was suggested, we have learned, is incongruous with congerence game rules and therefore can not be used.

In all fairness it must be said that the Varsity band has done enough in the way of increasing game spirit—from playing during time outs to ably supporting the cheerleaders in yells—that it warrants the highest commendation. Their half time performance have probably brought more favorable comment to the UN than any other single factor.

In short, we think the Varsity band is unexcelled. We regret that what was meant for a constructive suggestion in Wednesday's editorial was in violation of game rules and led to misunderstanding among band members.

Through the thousands of store buyers who are the patrons of the apparel production centers of the nation comes the voice of the clothes-consuming public.

The choices of the retailers, transmitted to the manufacturing markets through millions of miles of their own and of salesmen's journeys, are originally the tastes of the wearers.

Designing room and production plan are ever-sensitive to the requirements of the public.

Double Talk

by
Don and Al Amsden

One of the Lincoln papers held a Kangaroo court on Nebraska football this week summarily exiling it to the wastes of Siberia.

Technically, this might be called impartial and realistic journalism. Certainly this sports editor was not concerned with reflecting feelings here on the campus.

But, with no contrary voices, this attitude may be accepted as the attitude of the student body. Also, there's an equal tendency to confuse the premature howls from outstate with campus opinion.

It all adds up to a psychological atmosphere that can be accepted as gospel, if no one bothers to argue the point. But this doesn't seem to be a true picture at all of the feelings of the student body. In fact, there seems to be strong reaction to that kind of talk. Premature and hasty talk of "change" and upheaval is running into increasingly stiff opposition.

We hope so. We have defended student spirit before in this column and now, if ever, is the time for it to prove itself. It will be evident at the Homecoming rally—that's a foregone conclusion. But certain groups are giving the thought to other ways to demonstrate definite support of the team and its coaches.

The team made a poor showing against Missouri last week, but it seems unnecessary for students who listened to the game (including ourselves) to remind the team of that fact. In spite of the criticism, the team has done little or no allying, altho they have two ready-made alibis in the ever-growing list of injuries to key players and the fact that all three Big Six opponents thus far encountered have been primed for the Nebraska game.

The team still hasn't lost its confidence, but they certainly can use the knowledge that the student body hasn't lost its confidence in them. The next couple of games may well be the crucial point in Nebraska football for years to come. Even if its only for the selfish motive of wanting to see a good football game, its important to show the team, that (regardless of what outsiders might say) we think they can play better ball.

If Nebraska wins Saturday, there will be lots of fellow travelers hopping back on the bandwagon. We figure now is the time to show both Bernie and the squad that we're riding with them all the way. The weak spot in this football picture may be remedied by just a show of support. It's easy to go along with the wolves, but we think we'll go the other way.

Homecoming and BHRH!!

Homecoming and the biggest weekend of the year.

A schedule, packed sardine-fashion, of activity for all. The premature cremation of the monstrous Jayhawk Wednesday eve, in reality, tinder-boxed all that is to follow but tonite the real fun begins.

Judging of the house decorations and the galaxy-of the BHRH officially opens the weekend. (While we welcome all old grads we're sorry you struggled through this institution so early and missed out on the fun we're having now.)

Early Saturday morning (remembering Homecomings in the past we decided it only fitting to exclude the word "bright" and say only "early") the Homecoming will wind its way through downtown Lincoln.

At half-time in the Husker-Jayhawk tussle the 1946 Pep Queen will be presented and the bands will perform. The day will be climaxed by the dance at the Coliseum and the coronation of the 1947 Pep Queen.

That's it, it's here and we're ready. Welcome again to one and all, and let's make this Homecoming a memorial one for a swell bunch of football players, a good coach and the best damn state in the Union.
