

The Eyes Have It

By Jeanne Kerrigan

The eyes haven't had much this week . . . in fact all they've noticed has been the half hearted attempt of student to get to classes amid all the homecoming-rally, rally rally. . . .

Norm Leger is evidently so worn out with all the week's activities that he can't control his speech without a great deal of tongue twisting . . . on second thought, YOU try to talk about "facial muscles" without getting a bit mixed up. . . .

I know the time for talking about muddled freshmen is, or should be past by this time of the year, but when a girl comes over to the Union looking for the University Club. . . .

Startled out of a reverie of some sort of Mr. Lawrence's news editing class one night, Bob Jeffries in answering a query about Princess Elizabeth replied that she was marrying Lord Mountbatten . . . imagine Mrs. Mountbatten would enjoy that. . . .

Then there was the girl who, after daydreaming in class, was madly copying her neighbor's notes which ran something like this—"Although printing expenses in that period were not increased, the newspapers were slowed down because of the almost doubled cost of construction of an outhouse" . . . our friend promptly retired behind her books in utter confusion. . . .

Comment overheard enroute from the question hour held in the Union ballroom Friday afternoon by Dr. Kurt Schuschnigg and made by an elderly Lincolnite. . . "They ought to make Dr. Schuschnigg a member of the history department . . . at least he knows what he is talking about." . . .

The reason why about 47 of the Kansas band members warmed the benches when the rest of the band marched at the game Saturday was because brand new uniforms ordered some time ago didn't arrive in . . .

Directory Plot Moves Quickly, Ends in Drama

Student Directory. Published by Student Foundation. $5.50.

This latest volume published by Student Foundation house has the distinction of already being referred to as the "Student's Home Companion" and could well be considered a must for the student bookshelf.

Compiled exactly from real-life situations and characters from a typical university campus, the book is a monument to statistical accuracy, valuable information and literary imagination on the part of its numerous co-authors.

Dramatic End.

Despite the wealth of names and addresses which predominate the central plot, the story moves rapidly to a highly dramatic ending involving the identity of a Student "Z" who has not figured previously in the tale.

Largely biographical, decidedly historical, numerically descriptive, not a little on the "whodunit" side and most assuredly an excellent basis for several compelling love stories, "Student Directory" is a moving epic of every-day college life woven from a magnificent panorama of student activities, university "haunts," faculty members and students, students, and more students.

Best Seller.

A best-seller by virtue of its size, readability, incomparable style and utter beauty of composition and organization, it is destined to join the ranks of literary classics, replace the World Almanac, Dun and Bradstreet and Who's Who.

If these accomplishments are not adequate, let it be predicted that it will also sweep the category of the "Ten Best on a Desert Island" all-time all-timers in literature.
