

Ohio Student Wins Masquers Award

Elizabeth Wetzel, of Ohio university, is the winner of the National playwriting contest sponsored by the Nebraska Masquers. Dean Graunke, Masquers president, announced.

Miss Wetzel's script, "As The Eagle Grows," described by Graunke as a poetic drama, won the $100 prize in the first Masquers play contest, which is to be an annual affair. The play is tentatively scheduled for production by the University Players.

The five winning scripts in the preliminary contest, two by Nebraskans, were delivered in person to Brock Pemberton, theatrical producer in New York, by Graunke last fall. Other judges were Garrett Leverton of the Samuel French theatrical publication, and Professor L. C. Wimberly, editor of the Prairie Schooner.

Cast Iron Pooch Bests Four Autos

"Smokey", the little black cocker spaniel who mascots at the SAM house has an enviable record that many a pedestrian may someday wish were his.

Smokey, seen by students for the past two years going to and from class in a carefree manner that many a student would like to own, has suffered four auto collisions the past semester and as yet has not shown the wear and tear of his mishaps.

Certainly Smokey has lived four of his lives without any harm for he looks in better shape every day. His only vulnerable spot is his stomach. He has found out through bitter experience that a sound and regular diet is vital.

When questioned to his source of phenomenal luck Smokey just pants, nonchalantly, wags his tail and gallops off to lead his dog's life.

$50 Scholarship Available at Ag
