Average Afternoon Pictured By Impressionistic Reporter

BY SUSIE REED

It's just another afternoon in the Rag office. The typewriters bang merrily and the staff goes to work.

"Do you want me to write that feature on anything in particular, Jeanne?"

"Huh-uh."

"That's mean, I can't think—"

"Stop talking and start writing!"

Cub Clem stops whistling. "Fritzer! What did you get in Ec?"

"Eight."

Cub laughs. "What did you get—a nine?"

"Yeah."

Chair Shortage

There is a "discomzobulating" shortage of chairs in the Rag office. One of the workers quietly steals into the Cornhusker office and slips out with a chair.

"Where are you going with that chair?" somebody booms. The worker pays no attention and walks out, dragging the chair through the door.

"How about Friday?"

"No, somebody has to be able to work here Saturday morning."

"Why don't you refresh your mind with something exciting?"

"Why don't you refresh your mind with something exciting?"

"Boy! This is the best paper west of Des Moines."

"Here's a one-eighteen two line head," says Jeanne, shoving a story across the table to Cub.

Cub is reading the best paper west of Des Moines. "Jolted by—"

"Two line!"

"Jolted by"—You want a three line head?"

"No, two line."

Norm Leger hands in twenty-four inches of news. "Why do some people think of so many things to say?" asks someone in a "Pedro" accent.

Rag Staff Works

Workers stroll into the Cornhusker office, greeting the busy Rag staff as they go by. The Cornshucks staff strolls up to the Crib.

"Does this make sense? 'A twelve piece band features twenty-four drums.' I'd like to see that, Nancy, how can a twelve piece band feature twenty-four drums?"

"Drums, not drummers."

"Oh, I see. There are twenty-four drums right beside each other with their little 'gizmots'. Every man has a drum."

"I want a rabbit. Look at this cute rabbit."

"A Mrs. Santa Claus now."

Fig rushes up to the M. E. with his usual question. "How about a nice head on that Prom Queen story?"

The chatter continues on late into the afternoon. "Me know where squaw is?"

"Where?"

"Papoose know?"

"No know."

"Ugh."
