

226 High School All Staters to Register For Music-Speech Festival June 10-July 1

University Departments Offer Intensified Instruction at Clinic

The 226 high school students who are entering the all-state high school music-speech festival at the university this week will receive intensified instruction for the next three weeks.

The department of music will offer courses in band, orchestra, chorus and theory. Each student registering in music must take part in two of the three major ensembles.

Each music student will receive six private lessons in either voice or his chosen instrument. Lessons cannot be divided between different instruments or between an instrument and voice because of the limited instructional time. Each music student will be required to take one class a day in music theory and appreciation.

Eligibility.

The All-State course is open to girls who are sophomores, juniors, seniors or graduating from high school and to boys including the ninth grade.

The department of speech and dramatic art is offering courses in dramatics, debate and discussion, radio, original speaking and interpretative reading.

All speech students will participate in a verse speaking choir. In addition, each will select one group activity chosen from dramatics, radio, debate and discussion and one individual activity chosen from original speaking or interpretative reading.

To Give Recitals.

Speech students will have an opportunity to appear as readers or speakers in regular student recitals. The dramatics students will produce two full evenings of plays toward the close of the course. The debaters will present a public discussion of next year's high-school debate question.

The radio students will produce regular on-the-air programs over local and state stations. The verse speaking choir will appear in the final All-State speech and music concert.

Must Attend.

All students are expected to attend all of the evening recitals and public productions, both in speech and music.

The All-State high school course for speech and dramatic art is open to all girls and boys attending high school from the ninth grade to, and including, those graduating this year.

All concerts and recitals during the three weeks will be held in the air-cooled ballroom of the Union. There will be concerts every Sunday afternoon and recitals by guest artist, faculty and students in the evenings.

Registration of 226 high school students for the all-state music and speech festival being held at the University from June 10 to July 1, will begin Thursday morning in the Union ballroom, according to director David Foltz of the University music school.

All those entering the music division of the festival will register at 10 a. m. Thursday, Foltz said. Speech registration will be from 1:30 to 4:30 p. m. in the Union ballroom. All classes will start Friday.

To Tryout

Tryouts for positions in the band and chorus will be held at 9 a. m. Thursday in the Union faculty lounge and room 316.

Lasting three weeks, the festival will close on the evening of July 1 with a final concert in the coliseum. Concert will include numbers from the speech ensemble, band, orchestra and chorus.

Something new will be inserted in the all-state festival this year when teaching will be turned toward learning about the UN through music in co-operation with Chancellor Gustavson and the UN educational project being conducted at the University this summer.

The final concert will include music and speech numbers from different countries. Chancellor Gustavson has also consented to speak at the concert, Foltz said.
