there was no need of bypassing the U.N." If we really believed in the United Nations, we would have used their machinery, was his opinion.

As a political measure, he pointed out, the plan was directly against the U. N. charter. "We threatened to use force to stop the U.S.S.R., and branded the Russians as aggressors—measures which would be handled by the security council," the law authority said.

Declaring that Russian expansionism must be stopped, Dr. Eagleton said the job is one for the United Nations. Acting through the U. N., the U. S. would earn the respect of member nations; if we give the impression of a private dispute between the U. S. and Russia, smaller nations will do their best to stay clear, he added.

There are two roads to national security, the U. N. advisor said. One is the good old road which leads to war—a heavy armament program coupled with total war preparedness; the other is collective security. The U. S. has chosen neither, he said.

More men students took part in the University of Nebraska intramural-recreation athletic program during the past school year than ever before.

L. E. Means, head of the men's physical education department, reported Wednesday there were 8,900 participants in intramurals for 1947-48, compared with 6,036 for 1946-47, the previous high. The totals include the men who took part in more than one event.

The program featured 5,189 games or events involving 798 teams. They were witnessed by an estimated 84,180 spectators. Intramurals include such sports as basketball, touch football, track, golf, boxing, bowling, handball, horseshoes, softball, volleyball and tennis.

Means also reported that miscellaneous activities and special events such as swim parties, un-organized recreation and condi-
