

Houses Look To Big IM Sport Year

As the fall semester begins, an expected twenty or more organized houses and independent organizations will once again begin participation in the far reaching intramural competition sponsored by the university.

The SAE's, defending champions in the nineteen event Jack Best Intramural Trophy race, will find a rough and rocky path to traverse in order to capture the coveted trophy which they have won for two straight years.

The first sport to get underway will be touch football, September 23. Next in line will be basketball free throws, tennis singles, and a fall golf tournament. Team table tennis, bowling, handball tournaments, swimming, wrestling, and cross-country races will probably start before November 1.

Director of intramurals, Lou Means, has called the first meeting of the intramural committee for September 20 at 5:00 P. M. in the Physical Education building. All organized houses and independent organizations are urged to attend the meeting to plan the coming intramural season.

Mr. Means said that he hoped to reach all men not taking physical education with the bigger intramural program. He fields that this form of recreation is healthy, is good for making social contacts, and is a wonderful outlet for mental and emotional tension.

The new athletic field at the Ag College will not be used until spring when the seeded grass gets a strong and vigorous start. It is hoped that some of the fields will be open to night play.

A program is also open to faculty men, with new private dressing rooms in the P. E. building or coliseum.

Tournaments are planned in bowling, tennis, badminton, golf, and other selected sports.

Cyclones Claim Lightest Squad

Nebraska's opening game with Iowa State, Sept. 25, will put the Cornhuskers against one of the lightest teams in conference football this season.

The Cyclones will challenge Kansas for the right to be called the lightest team in major competition this year. Iowa State will average 188 in the line, 172 in the backfield, and 182 as a unit.

Coach Abe Stuber's players meet Iowa Teachers College Saturday afternoon in a game which is expected to bring out Cyclone defects.

Iowa State's starting offensive lineup appears to be shaping along the lines of veteran juniors as the opening game nears. Stuber will probably field Dean Laun and Dean Norman, ends; Tom Southard and George Griedl, tackles; Joe Brubaker and Billy Myers, guards; Rod Bust, center; Don Ferguson, quarterback; Webb Halbert and Bob Angle, half-backs; and Bill Chauncey, full-back. Every man in the lineup is a returning letterman and a junior.

Tickets Going Fast For All Home Games

Stadium seats are no longer available for the UCLA homecoming encounter, and the bleacher section is going fast, according to Business Manager A. J. Lewandowski.

Football fans can still be accommodated for the three other home games. The November 20th battle with the highly rated Missouri Tigers is the fastest selling of these.

Sellouts are expected for all the contests as the orders for the Iowa State opener and Kansas State band day continue to pile upon Lewandowski's desk.

General admission tickets will not be available to Nebraska fans this season. The bleachers have been reserved for the Notre Dame and UCLA games and knotholders have priority for the others.

Heaviest orders on tickets for games away has been for the student migration to Lawrence, Kansas. If the demand exceeds the quota of 1,500, "Lew" hopes to obtain a few more.

The business manager anticipates sales reaching 1,000 each for the Minnesota and Colorado games, and 500 apiece for Oklahoma and Oregon State.

Penn State Scarlet Football Foe in '49

The University of Nebraska football team has signed a home and home series with Penn State, starting in 1949.

Nebraska visits State College, Pa., on October 15, 1949, and will meet Penn State in Lincoln October 21, 1950.

The Huskers hope to make alternate trips to the East and West each year said Coach George (Potsy) Clark. This fall they travel to Oregon State.
