

New Halls Transform Campus

BURNETT HALL—Housing the school of Journalism this year is this new building located next to Andrews Hall. Included in this building are several new machines and the latest equipment for university journalism majors. Foreign language classes will also be held here.

NEW INTRAMURAL BUILDING—Nebraska's students will have a new home for their intramural and physical education activities this year. The former army gym at Camp Crowder, Mo., was secured by the University and is ready for action.

"The old order changeth yielding place to new."

And this year the university has $905,000 worth of new order, for Burnett Hall, the Physical Education building, and the Military and Naval Science building are ready for classes.

"The New Big Three" will not only relieve the classroom shortage but will help to modernize and beautify the campus. The construction of these buildings is part of an over-all plan to improve the campus.

Burnett hall will be used as a general classroom building and as headquarters for the Journalism department. Located directly west of Andrews hall, this three-story structure cost $500,000.

University Hall, part of the old order of campus buildings and the former headquarters of the Journalism department, will be razed this fall.

Coming all the way from Camp Crowder, Mo., as a transfer "student," the Physical Education building will be used for physical education classes, intramural basketball games, and as headquarters for the Intramural Athletic Department. The building is a war surplus sports arena.

The cost of moving this building was borne by the Federal Works administration. However, the university spent an additional $30,000 to reinforce the framework and to brick veneer the exterior in order to give the building semi-permanent existence.

Altho not yet completely finished the Military and Naval Science building was used last spring and will again be used for R.O.T.C. and N.R.O.T.C. classes.

The second floor of the building is used as a drill hall, while the main floor is used to house computers, directors, large guns, mines, torpedoes, and dummy loading machines
