

'Beyond the Horizon' Tryouts Begin Oct. 11

Tryouts for Eugene O'Neill's "Beyond the Horizon," second University Theatre production of the current season, will begin Monday, Oct. 11 from 2 to 5 p.m. in 306 Temple, announced play director, Max Whittaker, Saturday.

Further tryouts will be held Tuesday, Oct. 12, from 2 to 5 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. in 201 Temple, and Wednesday, Oct. 13 from 2 to 5 p.m. in 306 Temple.

Play Has 15 Parts

Director Whittaker has revealed the production has parts for 12 men and three women. Any student with sophomore standing and one year at the university is eligible. The play will be presented on Nov. 17, 18, 19, and 20.

"Beyond the Horizon" is described as an intensely realistic modern tragedy with poetic beauty. A Pulitzer prize play of 1920, it portrays a grim story of New England.

The play tells the story of two brothers, diametrically opposite in character. The first, Robert, is poetic, restless, curious about what lies "beyond the horizon"; Andrew, the other brother, is matter-of-fact, practical, unimaginative, and perfectly content with his lot as a farmer.

Fate Intervenes

In usual O'Neill fashion, fate intervenes. As Robert is about to realize his lifelong ambition to travel on a sailing vessel, he discovers and reveals his romantic love for his brothers' sweetheart, Ruth.

The inevitable outcome is one of frustration and tragedy for the three principals involved, providing a stirring climax.

Top Engineer Positions Open In Civil Service

It is still possible to file for P-1 grade Engineering positions in Washington, D. C., the U. S. Civil Service Commission has announced.

Although no written test is required, either four years of completed college study in professional engineering leading to a bachelor's degree, or 4 years of progressive experience in technical engineering, or a time equivalent combination of both are specified.

Applications will be accepted from students who are within 6 months of completion of their college course. Age limits are from 18 to 35, but will be waived for veterans with preference.

Corn Cobs To Sponsor Float Contest

The homecoming float parade of last year, according to committeemen Harvey Davis, Elroy Gloystein and Lee Harris. The Corn Cobs are again sponsoring the parade which was initiated into homecoming festivities last year.

All university organizations are eligible for entry. The same trophies, one to the best float in the men's class and one to the best float in the women's class, will again be awarded this year. A and veterans preference may be obtained at most first and second class post offices, Civil Service regional offices, or the U. S. Civil Service Commission, Washington 25, D. C.

maximum of 15 dollars may be spent on each float.

Organizations will be sent letters next week outlining complete details for the parade along with the deadline for entries. The names of the three judges who will decide the float parade winners will be announced next week in the Daily Nebraskan.

To the unknowing observer, the bulletin board in the Cornhusker office would seem to add a touch of internationalism. For the tentative picture schedule posted on the board lists the following groups: Queens, Greeks and Army-Navy.
