

Poll Reveals Campus Parking Improved

According to a recent campus poll, the university parking situation has improved considerably over last year. Some students, however, feel there is still room for improvement.

Frank Faires, sophomore — "It is greatly improved."

Lucile Harkness, sophomore — "The parking situation is okay if you get to school early enough."

H. G. Katz, junior — "It's still tough if you don't get here early."

B. L. Baker, freshman — "The new parking areas are an improvement, especially the area behind Avery Chemistry building. You can usually find a parking place there as late as 9 o'clock."

"Improved a Lot."

Robert Langston, junior — "It has improved a lot over last year."

Keith Barker, junior — "No complaints—the parking situation is running pretty smoothly; as good as possible under the conditions."

Jerry Abbenhaus, graduate — "Much improved. One objection I have with the new parking areas is the arrangement where cars park directly behind one another. The usefulness of a car is limited when you're stranded in the parking stall from 8 to 5."

Anonymous — "It's all right if you get to school before 8 o'clock."

Later in the morning or in the afternoon the chances are slim that you'll find a parking space."

Faculty section comment — "Why so many reserved spaces for visitors and none for the faculty?"

Bruce Förd, junior — "The parking situation is all right, but where's the rag? For scooter parking, the situation is fine, it always has been good." (You can pick up a rag at the north entrance of Social Sciences, Bruce.)

Gerald Goede, sophomore — "It still could be improved. There is too much traffic congestion on the campus. An improvement is visible over last year, however. There is not enough enforcement of the regulations, since too many cars are parked on red lines and in restricted areas." ofxn
