Husker Football Policy Restated

Nebraska University has taken a stand on football questions today and has issued a restatement of policy toward football. Ten points were included in the statement and a promise of a new coach for spring football practice.

The Board of Regents, Chancellor R. G. Gustavson and the Board of Intercollegiate Athletics Saturday issued the following statement:

"In the past four years, the University of Nebraska twice has changed head football coaches. The University of Nebraska Board of Intercollegiate Athletics is now seeking a third new head football coach. The new coach will be selected and on duty for the opening of spring football practice.

"These changes have brought a barrage of talk which is healthy. Nebraska wouldn't be Nebraska without Cornhusker football talk. At this time, however, we feel that Nebraskans are entitled to a re-statement of University of Nebraska policy toward football.

Men Come for Education.

"1. The University believes that the young men who come to Nebraska and play football, come primarily for a sound education. The University will insist that these young men meet the conference scholastic requirements for participation in football.

"2. The University of Nebraska will not engage in what is commonly termed 'professional collegiate football'. The University is not going to the 'open market' to buy players. The University of Nebraska believes such practices are not in keeping with the best interests of higher education and feels that the overwhelming majority of Cornhusker football fans agree.

"3. The University of Nebraska, like other members of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, believes that young men who play football are entitled to the assistance provided by the NCAA 'Sanity Code'. This includes:

To Follow 'Sanity Code.'

- (a) Free medical attention.
 - (b) Three free meals per day in the pre-season training period and one free meal (evening) during the football season.
 - (c) Financial aid in the form of tuition scholarships on the basis of need, and granted by the same agency of the University which grants aid to all other students.
 - (d) Financial aid in the form of scholarships earned by football players in the field of scholarship.
 - (e) Financial aid in the form of part-time employment.
- "4. The University of Nebraska will continue to provide the best medical care obtainable for members of the football team. It will not permit the use of injured players.

No Supplementary Salaries Permitted.

"5. The University believes Cornhusker football teams deserve good coaching. The responsibility for recommending the hiring of the coaching staff rests with the Board of Intercollegiate Athletics. The Board is authorized to pay, if necessary, coaching salaries equal to those paid by other member schools of the Big Seven Conference. All coaches will receive their entire salary, as has been the case in the past, from athletic funds derived from receipts at University football games. No supplementary salaries from outside sources will be permitted. The man selected will be experienced in coaching athletics and will have a good record. The head coach will have authority to select his own assistants. The entire coaching staff should be capable teachers of football to both freshmen and varsity candidates.

"6. The University of Nebraska believes that frequent changing of coaches does not contribute to a sound football program.

"7. The University of Nebraska rejects the philosophy of football defeatism. It wants Cornhusker football teams to win games. The University is not content to be the perennial doormat of the Big Seven Conference. It would much rather be the perennial champion. There is, however, no point in being unrealistic. The Big Seven Conference is not what the Big Six used to be. It is tougher. The Conference championship is now a hard-fought prize. This means that the championship can be expected to shift from member to member in the Big Seven, just as championships shift from member to member in the Pacific Coast, the Southwest, the Big Nine, and other conferences.

Control Resides at N.U.

"8. The University believes that the control of athletics should reside in the institution. This is required by the Big Seven Conference. University of Nebraska students and Alumni are represented on the Board of Intercollegiate Athletics.

"9. The University of Nebraska has had no intention

Notice of Exams

Students are asked to disregard the final examination schedule which appeared in Friday's Daily Nebraskan. Several errors occurred in that schedule, the corrected form of which is printed today.

Anton Lawry attempts to take the ball away from Jayhawk Claude Houchin while Claude Retherford looks on in the Cornhusker's 52-34 victory over Phog Allen's Kansas cagers.

Nebraska's Cornhuskers conquered Phog Allen's Kansas University Jayhawks 52-34 in their Big Seven Conference opener before a crowd of 8,000 fans in the Coliseum.

The victory was Nebraska's third straight victory over Kansas in two seasons of play.

Both teams were cold in the first minutes of play and it wasn't until 3:25 of the first period that the Huskers broke the scoring deadlock. Claude Retherford put Nebraska in the scoring column with a hook shot from the corner. Gene Petersen, former Husker cager in 1945, tied the game at two all with a one-hander 15 seconds later.

Pierce Tallies

There was no further scoring until 5:35 of the first period when lanky Bob Pierce took a pass from Retherford to put Nebraska into a lead which was never headed.

Joe Malecek followed with two quick baskets to give the Scarlet an 8-2 advantage.

Coach Harry Good's charges completely gummed up Phog Allen's defensive works to add further confusion to the bewildered Jayhawks. Allen's new defense was a shifting, man to man, zone defense.

The Husker's who just returned from the Kansas City tourney was looked like an entirely different team from the one which had played on the Coliseum court prior to Christmas vacation.

Take Control

Scarlet forwards continually broke up Jayhawk offensive thrusts and had almost complete control over the backboards.

Kansas forwards started picking up the Nebraska offense in the Husker's back court but that didn't bother Claude Retherford as the French Lick, Ind. ace dribbled and faked down court to send his favorite hook shot swishing through the nets and give Nebraska a 19-9 lead.

Freethrows paid off for the Husker's as they cashed in on 14 of 23 attempts. Kansas scored 14 of 27 through the game.

Phog Allen's Jayhawks were cold at the basket during the first half hitting only four out of a possible 35 field goals.

Harry Good's Huskers managed to pot 10 out of a possible 35 field goals before intermission.

26-14 Halftime

By the time intermission had rolled around the clock the Scarlet cagers were holding their own with a 26-14 advantage.

Claude Houchin opened the scoring after halftime dunking a charity toss for one point. Bill Sapp managed to take Petersen's rebound off the backboard to tip in two more points for the Jayhawks.

Retherford remained a thorn in the side of the Kansans as he dunked a basket with the help of

Committee Chairmen Named For Annual Engineers' Week

Committee chairmen for Engineer's Week were announced today by R. O. Bottum and Meno Wilhelms, co-chairmen of the annual event. Plans are now under way which, according to these men, point toward a bigger and better Engineer's Week.

Men in charge of various divisions are: Edgar L. Coleman, contest; Lloyd R. Dobney, traffic; Cecil J. Doubt, convocations; Burnell Fursteneu, ribbon sales; Alexander F. Henry, banquet; Vernon L. Hastings, window display; Andrew Miller, inquiries; Dan Jones, Sledge.

More Chairmen Named

Charles Roberts, field day; Joe Rogers, photographer; Neil E. Shields, secretary-treasurer; Bill Splinter and Kent Tiller, publicity; Paul Versch, program.

Work on Engineer's Week falls into two parts, the day for the public and the day for engineers. Since one of the primary aims of the affair is to further relations between the public and the Engineering College, care is taken to make the program one of general appeal. An effort will be made to "startle" the public with simple engineering fundamentals.

Magazine Furnished

Activity on the first day will center around a convocation, field day and picnic. In the evening will be the banquet at which Sledge, traditional Engineer's Week humor sheet, appears. Gems of engineering humor, collected during the year, are presented at this time.

Engineers Play Too

Field Day is the engineers'

Union to Present 'Foxes of Harrow'

Maureen O'Hara and Rex Harrison, English actor, co-star in "The Foxes of Harrow," feature attraction to be presented in the Union ballroom at 7:30 p.m. Sunday. This popular movie is in technicolor.

Coffee Hour and an organ interlude will be held in the Union lounge for the first time in '49 at 5 p.m. Sunday.

chance to enjoy their week alone. Limited exclusively to engineers, the activities include ball games, horseshoes and a picnic. Departments vie for prizes in the events. Most coveted distinction is winning the baseball game. Committee chairmen for the first day are convocation, banquet, Sledge, field day and program.

Men whose work will be toward the show for the public are, chairmen of the contest, traffic, ribbon sales, window display, inquiries and the photographer. Overall chairmen are the secretary-treasurer and the publicity.

Four Junior Moot Court Cases Close

Four junior teams have completed case proceedings in the Allen Moot Court competition.

Fuegate and Berkheimer defeated Burr and Peters, and Coyne and Wilson defeated Brower and Erickson in criminal law cases.

Boyd and Fiebig defeated Ellis and Leudtke in contracts, and Kratz and Calkins defeated Johnson and Hunter in an equity case. Juniors have one case left to argue.

Freshman competition of the Moot Court cases ended Dec. 20. Cases were judged by students from the Law school. Winners in the frosh arguments are:

Debating on Property:

Becker and Lavaty
Ravenscroft and Swartz
Orshek and Raymond
Pierce and Kalbin

Debating on Contract:

Metz and Crawford
Coulter and Jensen
Vrana and Barbour
Richards and Snider
Cobb and Fahrbrunbrech
Bosely and Jones
Blue and Brock
Derrin and Janowski
Johnson and Wilson
Dearden and Armstrong
Stahl and Moodle

Debating on Constitutional Law:

Willey and Gerlach
Whitworth and Miles
Stern and Solomon
Williams and Samuelson
Healam and Sewell
Ugala and Layan

Debating on Partnership:

ASME to Hear Nagler Speak On Bikini Tests

Forrest Nagler, Canadian archery champion, rifle marksman, author, big game hunter and chief mechanical engineer at Allis-Chalmers, will be the speaker at the Jan. 11 A.S.M.E. meeting. Election of officers will also take place at the meeting which will be held at 7:15 p. m. in Love library.

Nagler's topic will be "The Human Side of the Bikini Tests." Included will be a demonstration showing why the earth cannot go off in a chain reaction and explode like an atomic bomb. He is well qualified for this particular speech, because during the war he did work connected with the production of heavy machinery used in manufacturing the atomic bomb material. This work was concluded with a trip to witness the second, or underwater, burst at Bikini.

A University of Michigan graduate, Nagler joined Allis-Chalmers in 1906 as a supervisor in the field erection and testing of hydraulic and steam machinery. He is the inventor of the Nagler type of axial flow, high speed, hydraulic turbine runner, and has written many technical articles. Nagler is a life member of A.S.M.E.
