Campus Notables Respond To Query on Final Exams

"Du-u?hh!" he said looking up at me with his narrow, slit eyes and his heavy jowls hanging down to his shoulders.

I gave up. I decided it was no use questioning a bulldog on the vital question: "How do you feel about final exams?"

The next person on my list was Gregory Gregory, president of the Alpha Alpha Falfa house. Gregory was majoring in engineering. I walked up to the door of the house and knocked vigorously 23 1/2 times. Suddenly, to my horror, I found that the door had been opened on the 7th knock and that I had been pounding on the stony face of one of the stoic pledges.

Readjusting his nose, the pledge boomed in a high C voice: "Won't you come in?" I did, and in the parlor I found Gregory Gregory. He was toying with a bull-dozer. He had a wild look in his eye as he ran over two pledges who were ordered to pretend that they were trees.

Question Stated

Finally I put the question to him. "How do you feel about final exams?"

"Well, first of all, it puts an undue nervous strain on all those involved," he replied.

"How?" I queried, adjusting my war bonnet.

"First of all, take the fella that has consistently turned in good work all year and really knows his stuff. Maybe at the test he gets all excited and forgets things. Is it his fault?"

With this he began to sob fitfully with sympathy and sullenly picked up a parlor sofa with his bull-dozer. I decided to leave him in this poor state.

Then I spied James Nit, the campus wit, walking to class. Desperately I hurried to catch up with him.

Is It True?

"Is it true that the campus shortened your name to Nit the Wit, and then the inevitable followed?"

He winced. "Say, how do you feel about final exams?"

He winced again. Then he looked at me sharply and said: "If I don't know my studies by now, I never will know them. And if I studied, I would only have everything to lose if I took a test. Furthermore, I believe that there should be no system of grading other than two grades: satisfactory and unsatisfactory."

"Wouldn't that system be satisfactory?"

"Of course," he replied. "Exactly."

Confusion Reigns

By this time I was completely confused. Once again Nit's profound wit had baffled me.

It was time for my 10 o'clock final. I went in to class thoroughly prepared. I missed every baffling question. It was not till later that I found that I had mixed my crib notes and was copying my laundry list.

In answer to the question: "What was Napoleon famed for?" I had put "two pair of socks and a bow tie." The teacher had written on my test paper: "Your answer, while incorrect was very interesting."

That's finals for you!

As I Was Saying...

By Carolyn Bukacek.

The old town promises to be pretty dull for a couple of weeks starting Sunday. In order to counter-act the extremely moralizing effect of such a grind, high-minded students have organized a weekend of revelry and gala entertainment.

Sigma Chi pledges will give their all to keep the active chapter happy Friday night. Couples in attendance will include Jim Van Burgh and Pat Gaddis, Warren Jensen and Pat Laffin. A loving cup and white roses will be waiting for the girl to chosen Sigma Chi pledge sweetheart.

Girls from all parts of the campus are tearing their hair trying to be original in their costumes for the ATO pledges party, also Friday. It's on a Be-Bop theme, which idea has charmed Anita Spradling and Nancy Davis into accepting dates with Doug Dale and Bob Hartsock respectively. Also worth watching will be Jack-soon-to-go-steady Selzer and Shirley Allen. Bob Berkshire will cover a basketball game that evening escorted by Carmen Christofel. Too bad he couldn't make the party.

The Theta's went to deep sooth for inspiration and came up with a Mardi Gras Ball, complete with confetti and balloons. Jack Hill and Chuck Thorne are waiting for a personal invitation from Joan Farrar. They'll probably still be waiting Saturday night. Planning to attend: Amy Jo Bergh and Sandy Crawford, Jan Getzler and Gus Reidy.

Pershing Rifles will party with a military air in the armory Friday night, according to word from Roz Howard. His evening will include the company of pin-mate AND company sponsor Katharine Withey. Robert Hahn will squire Ann Augustine.

The Lincoln Hotel will be crowded with autograph hunters and the like Friday night. Attention will be focused on Theta Xi Dreamgirl Virginia Huston of cinema fame. Brother Bob has his hands full stalling off would-be suitors for his sister. Interesting to note will be Georgia Shantz. Seems he will have his hands more than full that evening.

Pulling in the more temperate students will be the Dri-Nite Club Party at the Union. There to give full testimony will be Don Finstrom and Nancy Glynn. Margaret Muscheites and Dick Michalek.

The Red Carnation Ball Saturday night will be held at the Cornhusker. Alpha Chi's and their dates in attendance will include Margy Cherny and Don Spomer, Ginger Taylor and Chuck Bressman, Dorl Borgens and Bob Hunt.

Going Steady.
 Molly Mhyre and Earl Comerford Pinned
 "Wimp" Washington and Bob Capel.
