French Society Plans Costume Dancé Saturday

The Alliance Francaise, campus French club, will hold a costume dance in the Georgian room at the Hotel Cornhusker Saturday evening, Feb. 5. This dance replaces the regular monthly meeting of the club and will be open to non-members of the club and all friends and students of French. This is the first time such a dance has been on the yearly program and, according to Emily Schossberger, program chairman of the club, it may become an annual event.

The Shiloneck orchestra will play for the dance and the Georgian room will be converted into a typical French dance hall. There will be door prizes and a raffle for a surprise package with a French flavor.

Arrangements for tickets—$1.20 single, $2 per couple—can be made by phoning Mrs. Coover, Department of Romance Languages, Ext. 3151, or Miss Schossberger, Editorial office, Ext. 4204. They can also be bought at the door.

It is not necessary to speak French in order to attend this dance for the motif is "Bal de l'Entente Cordiale."

Eight Student, Faculty Artists Represented in Joslyn Exhibit

Eight students and faculty members of the university art department are represented in the 17th annual Six States Exhibition which opened Feb. 2 at Joslyn Art Museum in Omaha.

Three gouache drawings done by Donald C. Ellis, a January graduate, were among the entries accepted. The pictures were "Hotel Victoria," "Lower K Street," both of which received jury honorable mention, and "Junction Store."

Another gouache drawing, "Ascension of Eve," by David W. Seyler, was also awarded jury honorable mention. Seyler, who is an instructor in the art department, has another painting in the show—an oil titled "Man Combing His Hair."

OTHER OIL PAINTINGS are "Lincoln Railroad Yard," by LeRoy K. Burket; "Lost in the Forest," by Kady B. Faulkner; "Languid Afternoon," by John Kirsch and "Two Rooms," by Elizabeth Lamb Quinton. Watercolors exhibited are Dwight Kirsch's "Hallett's Peak," John Kirsch's "The Round Cloud" and Elizabeth Quinton's "Salem Service." Two pieces of sculpture by Katherine Nash are included. Joslyn Art museum opened in 1931 with a Nebraska-Iowa show and continued on a small regional basis for three years. In 1934 the number was expanded to five to include Kansas, South Dakota and Colorado. The addition of Missouri in 1939 completed the present group.

THROUGHOUT THE HISTORY of the exhibition the jury system has remained flexible. In some years the museum has selected an artists' jury and more recently, a multiple lay jury with an artist chairman.

This year the largest number of entries in any Six States exhibition was received. From them the jury selected 149 oils, 59 watercolors and 26 sculptures, representing 179 artists' work, to remain in the show. No single awards were made this year. Instead, the jury chose for honorable mention oils, watercolors and sculpture which were considered especially noteworthy. The show will close March 13.
