

Scientist, Journalist Will Help Observe Charter Day

Two prominent persons, one in science and the other in journalism, will help the University of Nebraska observe the 80th anniversary of its chartering on Feb. 15.

They are E. C. Stakman, nationally prominent University of Minnesota scientist who is the 1949 president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and Eugene Robb, assistant general manager of the Hearst newspapers.

DR. STAKMAN will address the Charter Day convocation to be held the morning of Feb. 15. During the convocation the University will confer its highest non-academic honor, the Nebraska Builder award, upon a prominent citizen of the state.

The speaker is chief of the Division of Plant Pathology and Agricultural Botany at Minnesota. He is a scientist and philosopher who has won many honors for his research in this country and abroad and has served on many important national and international scientific committees and boards.

ROBB will speak at the annual Charter Day dinner sponsored by the Lincoln club of the Nebraska Alumni Association. The dinner will be held Charter Day evening in the Union ballroom. He will share the rostrum with Chancellor R. G. Gustavson who will speak briefly.

Mr. Robb graduated from Nebraska in 1930. He was an outstanding student as an undergraduate, being selected for membership in Phi Beta Kappa. Later he took graduate work at Princeton and then obtained a Doctor of Jurisprudence degree from George Washington University.

In addition to being assistant general manager of the Hearst papers, he is a director of Pejepscot Paper Co., and Washington Editor of Forbes Magazine.

Retraction

Because of a story turned in incorrectly to The Daily Nebraskan editor, there was an error in the Student Foundation story in Friday's edition.

It was stated that all Student Directory salesmen would be awarded one point for every directory sold after Jan. 2. The correction is: One point will be awarded for every directory sold on or after Feb. 2. Prior to that time, one point will be given for every ten directories.
