

Tennis Racket Uncovered at UN

Scandal Bared In Mausoleum

In a late bulletin, hand printed on gold stationery, "Hotsy" Clark, UN athletic dissector, announced today that an infamous tennis racket has been discovered in the Mausoleum

Coach Lollie Heppley stated, "I don't understand how it happened. The tennis racket arose before I realized it. There is only one course left for me. I'm all unstrung."

As he leapt from the new Physical Refrigeration Building, Heppley's voice rang out mournfully. "I can see now that this will drag my name through the courts."

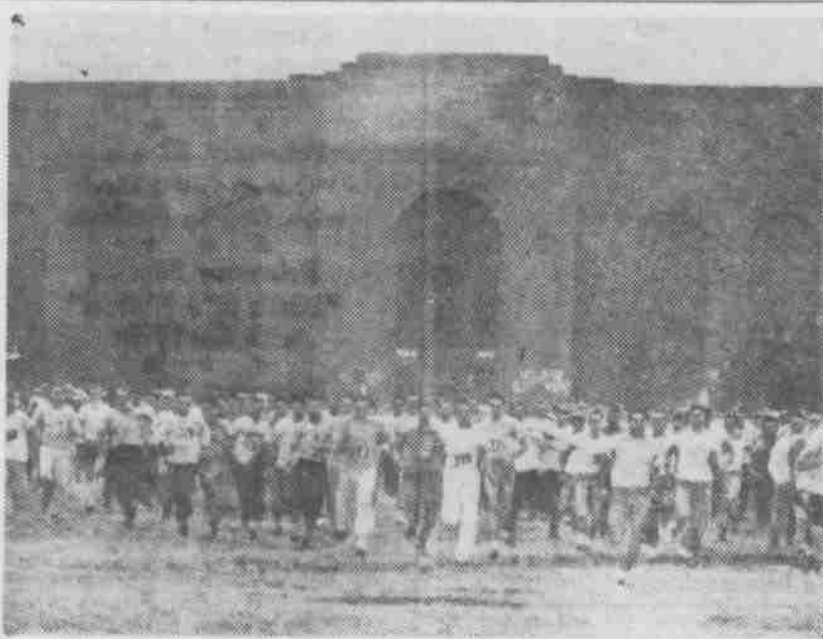

Members of the Athletic Bored were unavailable for comment (per usual), but Fig Flugg, prominent End man, stated his views. (We didn't ask him). "I personally investigated this racket and these are my findings: a group of students broke into the building during exam week and absconded with all the tennis equipment by mistake. Having so much equipment on their hands that they could never hope to use, the students have been black-mailing Coach Heppley for several weeks."

A. J. Spew, sitting in his gold-plated office, moaned, "We'll never make a net profit now."

ATO's Slump In Intramurals

According to Scrub Lem, sports publicity director for the women's snooker team, the Alpha Tassles Omegas "ain't been doing too red hot." After a clean sweep in the penny pitching tourney and a first and second in the "malt" guzzling tilt, the ATO sportsters have slumped miserably. It has been rumored that they are seriously considering transferring to a different league. (The Isaac Walton maybe).

ARDENT ADMIRERS rush to congratulate Nielson after the outcome of the Tiddly-wink Tourney is announced.

Nielson Cops Honors In Tiddly-wink Meet

Gracie Nielson rode to the intramural tiddly-wink championship with her outstanding performance Monday afternoon in the towel room of Grunt Memorial Hall. Nielson, who also copped the mumble-peg laurels in November, is the only double winner in the history of the university.

Displaying a developed form and polished technique, Nielson tiddled wink after wink into the scoring cup, edging out her opponent, Miriam Crick, A. W. O. L. board prexy, with an overwhelming score of 401-2.

Nielson's sponsoring house, Gamma Flip, lost all hope of victory, Friday, when it was discovered that she had a hang nail on her tiddling thumb, but university trainer, Back Burger, shaped her up nicely and she was in excellent condition.

After receiving the round-trip to Crete or Ashland as grand prize, Miss Nielson said "I'm very glad it's over. Please hand me a Cheaterfield."

SPECIAL BULLETIN

Word has just reached the Daily Blunder that Miss Neilson has just sprained her tiddling thumb trying to open a cold can of root beer. Oh woe! All hope is lost for the Btg-7 Tiddly-Wink championship.

Miss Neilson only comment was, "anyway I can still enter the chess tournament."

Intramural Standings

A limited schedule of games was played in the Intramural Leagues, Monday. The only scheduled events taking place were in the mixed-doubles Hide 'n' Go Seek tourney.

The Alpha Flea "A" team strengthened its hold on second place in League 1, by romping over the Deals 13-3. Awful Tau O's "C" club slipped past the Singa Delta Taus 11-10 in an overtime. Play was halted because of darkness.

League 2 action saw Sigma Alpha Everyone swamp the AOPot's 32-17. Phi Sigh poured through 22 pints to pace Pie Phi to a 31-28 win on a wet field. Fly Gams squeezed the Triple Diapers, 22-20.

The only upset of the day were the Koppa Dolts who crushed the Bettas, 50-31.

Dee Gees were ruled ineligible for competition by the powers that be because of previous victories.

It's The Man Who Pays

A. J. Spew, university payments consumer, announced today that a new system of comfort stations is being installed in the men's locker room. This system requires a slight fee of one nickel for all intended users.

With this arrangement in force, new employees will be needed. This problem was solved immediately when Spew announced, "I have two cousins who will be glad to help us out (at $7.50 an hour)."

Change can be obtained from Spew's office at the rate of four nickels for a quarter, eight for one-half dollar. This may seem a high rate of profit, but Spew stated, "We need the extra money to make ends meet."
