

UNESCO Delegates Pass Amended Copyright Bill

The last session of the model UNESCO conference starts today at 3 p. m. in the Coliseum.

Three-Way Agreement Ends National Strife in 4th Session

A three-way out-of-session compromise brought about the passage of a resolution to hold an international copyright convention at the fourth session of the model UNESCO conference. The Thursday night session also approved an international board of technical experts.

The copyright resolution, proposed by Bolivia and amended by Lebanon, suffered serious alteration before being accepted by the conference.

Irene Hunter, Bolivian chairman, was the first speaker for the resolution, at the afternoon session. She pointed out the need for international control and disbursement of literature affected by copyright and the inadequacies of existing regulations.

United Kingdom, headed by Herbert Jackman, refuted Bolivia's argument by stating that "the proposal is not nearly so effective as the 1928 Bern law which is now in operation."

AN AMENDMENT, by Lebanon, changed the proposal to read "that plans for a world congress to discuss copyright be made" and that the resolution on the floor be a basis for the convention. The amendment carried and moderator, Ted Sorensen, tabled the resolution until the evening session.

During the recess a compromise was reached between Bolivia, Lebanon and the United Kingdom. The compromise set up specific regulations for the convention and made attendance by UNESCO nations arbitrary. The compromise amendment was accepted by a narrow margin.

A resolution to set up a board of technical experts, the cost to be borne by the nations receiving aid, was supported by India.

UNITED STATES delegate, Joris Devereaux, rose to amend the motion to read that this assistance would in no way involve the usage of the atomic bomb or atomic energy research. The amendment was not seconded.

Italy asked for an amendment which would cause half of the cost of the operation of the board to be borne by UNESCO. Czechoslovakia pointed out that UNESCO does not have the funds to accept such a responsibility. The amendment did not receive the necessary two-thirds majority.

Luxemburg stated that the resolution as it stood involved government sponsorship of private industry. The argument was refuted by Belgium.

AWS Applications Due February 23

Filings for AWS Board will be open until Feb. 23, Marian Crook, president, announced today.

Any freshman, sophomore or junior woman is eligible. Candidates may file in Ellen Smith Hall.

Each candidate will be interviewed by senior members and officers of the board. Final decision will be based upon the leadership qualities and knowledge of AWS which the girl exhibits. AWS nominees will be on the slate in the women's spring election.

Applicants for AWS board membership must comply with the following rules:

1. Each candidate shall be a bona fide member of the class which she proposes to represent. Regular University Rules shall govern in determining a candidate's class.
2. Each candidate shall have a weighted scholastic average of at least 80 percent.
3. At the time of nomination the candidate must have no scholastic delinquencies. (i. e., no down slips, no failures, no incompletes).

Roach Tells Role of US Commission

The position of the United States in UNESCO was summarized by Constance Roach, director of education for the U. S. commission, at the third session of the model UNESCO conference.

Miss Roach, who has served the federal government in several fields of education, stated that the United States works through a commission composed of some 50 delegates and clerical personnel.

"The commission's purpose is two-fold. First it presents UNESCO's case to the American people. Second, it acts as a liaison group between the American people and the international organization," she said.

Fulfilling its first mission is chiefly a problem of education, Miss Roach said.

"Nebraska is one of the most effective demonstrations of that type of public education which the commission seeks to give. It is an example that I hope will be copied throughout the country," she continued.

In acting as a liaison group, the commission promotes educational reconstruction and exchange of persons, she said. In the past two years more than $2 million have been spent for rehabilitation of devastated European schools through such agencies as WSSF, she continued.

Colleges as well as non-academic groups have participated in the exchange program, she said. Kansas is planning to sponsor a summer camp for children in Europe, she added.

"One of the commission's greatest difficulties is finding persons qualified to speak on UNESCO to all the groups who request speakers. I hope that speakers of this type will be more available as a result of this conference," Miss Roach concluded.

Pageant A-Muses Delegates With Mt. Olympus Comedy

By Norma Chubbuck and Gene Berg

Diversion came to delegates and spectators of the model UNESCO conference Thursday night through the Muses of Mount Olympus.

The University Orchestra, Singers and Madrigals helped the sacred Greek muses in their attempt to solve a lovers' quarrel over modern art and poetry.

Some 275 students, under the direction of Dr. Arthur E. Westbrook, Emanuel Wishnow and David Foltz, presented an hour-long entertainment at 9 p. m. in the University Coliseum.

BUILT AROUND A SCRIPT entitled "Modern Art and Mount Olympus," written by Herbert Berry, graduate student, the program alternated between action on the stage and music by the Orchestra and Singers.

The script told the story of two lovers, Ann Proper and Clarence Denton, who rifted over art and poetry and the efforts of Speaker Dwight Smith to reconcile them. He was "assisted" by Wilbur Morris and the five Muses, Gaylord Marr, Tom Stimfig, Milton Hoffman, Dean Wells and Dewey Ganzel.

CHANCELLOR R. G. GUSTAVSON opens the second session of the three-day UNESCO conference. Gustavson praised the students for their work in simulating the actual UNESCO process. Seated at his right is Marian Crook, chairman of the Executive board; Dr. Albert Rosenthal, former UNESCO public relations director; Ted Sorensen, moderator.

'New York Times' Lauds UNESCO

UNESCO makes the Times! A story about model UNESCO conference now in session appeared in one of this week's issues of the New York Times.

The story, which was run before the conference opened, stated that Nebraska University students were staging an experiment in education. It considered the conference as proof of growing student interest and influence in national and international affairs.

Wishnow Plays Kansas Clinic

Emanuel Wishnow, professor of violin and conductor of the University orchestra, was guest soloist and conductor at the Western Kansas String Clinic held in Hays, Kans., Feb. 11-12.

Dick Speaks On American Frontier Days

American frontier history was a part of the "perennial re-birth of society" and holds the key to American history, stated Dr. Everett Dick, professor of history at Union College in an address to Alpha Kappa Delta Wednesday night.

Members of the sociology honorary fraternity heard Dr. Dick describe the American frontier as the twilight zone passing from east to west through the darkness of savagery.

"IMMIGRANTS began their trek through the frontier zone as Europeans and came out on the west side as Americans. In this process they went down to the level of savagery, conquered by the frontier," he said.

Dr. Dick cited instances of violence occurring in frontier days as evidence of the primitive life of the pioneer.

Various characteristics were born during frontier days which are now accepted as part of American life, he said. Open-handed hospitality, ingenuity, descriptive language, rough humor, strict family discipline, and a general dislike for pomp and ceremony were among examples pointed out by the professor.

COMMENTING on pioneer religion, Dr. Dick said, "Clergymen often preached more with vigor than with intellect and spiritual religion was taken seriously by the frontier people."

Girls Who Can't Say 'No'

"We wanted to show that we knew how to say 'no' in Arabic, but we had to vote yes on the proposal."

Thus, one of the red-capped Lebanon delegates explained a dilemma that was one of the side-lights of the mock UNESCO conference.

The Far East country held a hurried caucus of its Gamma Phi Beta delegates on the second resolution. Although some of the representatives saw red—their fessas, not Communism—duty triumphed, and Lebanon joined the affirmative.

Entries Sought For Foundation Name Contest

The Student Foundation is sponsoring a New Name contest to find a new title for their organization.

The contest opened on Feb. 6 and will close at midnight Thursday, Feb. 24. Chancellor R. G. Gustavson is offering a $10 prize to the person submitting the most appropriate name for the group.

All entries should be short, clear and appropriate. The name should express the purpose and work of the present Student Foundation.

The purpose of the Student Foundation is to instill a deeper loyalty for the University in the undergraduate group, maintain spirit in the University alumni, educate high school students to advantages of University development and to be of service to the University.

A CHANGE of name was approved by the Student Foundation board last December after administrative officials pointed out the confusion between the titles of the Student Foundation and the University Foundation.

Entries may be brought to the foundation office, Room 308 of the Union. They may also be placed in two boxes in the Union lobby and Love library. A person may enter as many names as he wishes.

The winner will be announced March 1.

Delegate Talks On UNESCO At Radio Show

Herb Jackman, student delegate to UNESCO, will be the featured guest on the university radio show, "Your University News in Review," Friday at 4:30 over KOLN. Jackman will be interviewed by Bob Reidy.

Friday's production of "Your University News in Review", a weekly special feature of the radio section of the speech department, will be announced by Byron Krasne. The newscaster will be Clyde Luther.

Jr. Ak-Sar-Ben Date Corrected

The Junior Ak-Sar-Ben show will be held March 26 instead of April 2 as was stated in Thursday's "Rag" according to Bob Hamilton, president of Block and Bridle. The Ak-Sar-Ben Ball will be held as scheduled on March 25.

Hamilton emphasized the fact that registration is still open for entering the showmanship classes and for entry in the coed western stock saddle and English saddle riding contest, to be held in conjunction with the show. Registration for the show should be made by Saturday, Feb. 19, in Animal Husbandry hall.
