Blain Believes Future Looms For Psychiatry

Nothing can happen in the future that does not in some way bring in psychiatry, said Dr. Daniel Blain, medical director of the American Psychiatric Association at a convocation in the Union ball room Friday.

"Since such institutions of home, school, factory do play such an important part in our lives," he pointed out, "this opens a wide field for psychiatry. There are careers related to psychiatry as social work, clinical psychiatry and nursing with opportunities for a larger number of interested students."

MORE CAN BE done for mental diseases at the present time than for any other kind of diseases, he believes. He gave examples of helping patients to regain their minds and return to the normal emotional way of living, whereas it is not possible to obtain a new heart or lungs. This he said, makes psychiatry very optimistic work.

ANSWERING THE question as to what the citizens can do towards alleviating the situation of mental hospitals, Blain said that the solution is really in the citizens' hands.

"Is it the legislature that furnishes the money for improvement of state hospitals. And if enough citizens voice their opinions for such an allocation, the state hospitals can be definitely improved."

Blain ended his speech with four rules of appreciation which we should let govern our lives. They are: Appreciation of work, amount of rest, value of physical exercise and relaxation.

The convocation was sponsored by the University Health Center.

chapter in Lincoln will conduct the discussion. All women who have taken one or more courses in advertising or journalism and who intend to make a career of advertising are invited to attend the meeting.
