Ag Groups Hear UNRRA Official

"Farms in White Russia immediately after the war were poverty stricken."

Gladwin Young, of the USDA and one of a group of men sent to Russia in 1946 to distribute UNRRA supplies, made this statement at a meeting of the combined Animal Science clubs Thursday.

Young also showed some slides taken while in Russia. Included were pictures showing women harvesting grain with scythes and sickles. Young stated that 80 per cent of the farm work was done by the women and old men.

After the joint meeting, the individual clubs adjourned to conduct their business meetings.
