

Americans Must Escape Soviet Propaganda Traps

American citizens must learn to recognize and understand Communist Russia's three most vicious propaganda booby traps, Dr. Eugene N. Anderson, University of Nebraska historian said Tuesday night.

The three propaganda booby traps, Dr. Anderson listed as:

(1) Communism's claim that it alone can preserve peace among nations; (2) the claim that communism alone enables peoples to develop a full life without becoming menacing nations; and (3) communist contempt for self-determination of government, and cry that the only true way to human freedom is through communism.

COMMUNIST THEORY differs drastically from the American idea of the right of people to determine their own form of government. "A state may secede from the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics—in theory; but this can happen only in the case communist interests are served," Dr. Anderson said.

"Lenin, Stalin and other Communists have openly and repeatedly stated that communism can be established only by the use of violence, and rule must be by the party dictatorship . . . Stalin has said that all nations must become communist, and must become members of the federation of communist societies."

DR. ANDERSON concluded his address by stating, "The real competition to the United Nations is the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, an international body of peoples united by fraud and violence and held under the dictatorship of the international Communist party by violence."

(Editor's Note: This is the third in a series of five articles on communism and what it means to America. They are based on a series of lectures being given on the campus by University faculty members. The lectures seek to define what we mean by communism, and why communism is completely alien to American democracy.)

Winning Moot Court Teams Will Argue Final 'Test Case'

Ray A. Sheaff and Dean G. Kratz, William A. Rundle and John M. Strong, third-year winning moot court teams in Law college, will argue a final "test case" before members of the Nebraska supreme court at 7:30 p. m. Thursday. The competition will take place in one of the supreme court hearing rooms.

The right to compete in the finals of the Thomas S. Allen moot court competition was won by eliminating other student teams in earlier rounds of the contest in their first and second years at the college.

Sheaff and Kratz, will represent the government in a synthetic case testing the constitutional right of the executive branch to take over operation of a private enterprise in event of economic emergency during peace-time. Rundle and Strong will present arguments for a group of fictitious coal mine operators.

The winning student teams will receive Allen medals, a coveted award in the college, and their names will go on a memorial plaque. The hearing is open to the public.
