UN at NU . . .

NUCWA is organizing for action. NUCWA is established to develop informed and dynamic opinion on the United Nations. We believe that the choice for the future lies between a successful United Nations and chaos. We must act now to make the United Nations work. Informed public opinion will in a large way determine the outcome of the UN. In the formation of such opinion, we, as college students can play a vital role.

Through affiliation with such groups as the Collegiate Council for the United Nations, NUCWA will urge college students to stimulate better understanding of the purpose and functions of the United Nations. Plans include convocations at schools throughout Nebraska and at the University with foreign and American students as speakers. NUCWA will act as a UN information center on the campus to spearhead UN activities.

NUCWA stands first for world well-being. Concretely, this calls for whole-hearted support of a growing United Nations as the prime international institution for peaceful progress.

How does Nebraska compare with other universities in the field of UN work? CCUN alone is established on 152 campuses across the country. These groups are working in 38 states, Nebraska and Wyoming being the only states in the Mid-West without CCUN.

The number of UN councils and organizations indicates that they have become alive, constantly expanding organizations. These groups represent college students who believe that they have a stake in building the future of the United States, the United Nations and the world.

Here is a chance for Nebraska students to do something concrete and effective about what they hope for in the future of the world.

Georgia Dean Lets Out Leash On Freshmen

Increased dating privileges have been extended to freshmen at Agnes Scott College, Decatur, Ga., this semester. Miss Carrie Scandrett, dean of students, explained to freshmen that "increased responsibilities are given to each class as it shows ability and maturity to assume them."

Changes in freshmen dating rules as explained by Dean Scandrett are: (1) Single dating in the afternoon on the trolley; (2) Double dating in the evening on the trolley with any boarding student; (3) Double dating in a car at any time with any boarding student, provided they are going to a destination and keep within a restricted area prescribed by authorities; (4) Senior chaperonage is no longer necessary unless a freshman wishes to date in a car outside the restricted area or wishes late permission.

Sophomores also received the privilege of single dating until 11 p. m. with the understanding that no plans can be changed after leaving the campus. Dean Scandrett reminded the groups that the privileges were group privileges and would automatically be taken away if misused by any individual.

And NU students claim they're underprivileged!

Tulane Designs Foreign Work Training Plan

An international program designed to train persons for the United States foreign service and for service abroad in the employ of American corporations has been added to the curriculum of the College of Arts and Sciences at Tulane University, New Orleans, La.

Students entering the program have to meet university requirements for a B.A. degree in addition to those for certification in international affairs. Those desiring admission must submit an official transcript of their academic grades to the department of political science, at which time a personal interview will be arranged.

THE COMPLETION of the program does not automatically admit or qualify graduates for appointment to the foreign service. Regular State Department examinations must be passed. Special courses in the new program will include international relations, political geography, money and banking, international organization, international law, foreign trade, various histories of the United States and Europe, ocean transportation, and a special course in colonial policy which is offered at no other school in the country, the announcement disclosed.
