Constitutional Assembly.

The Constitutional Assembly will reconvene tonight in another attempt to draw up a constitution for representative student government. In light of the fact that the Faculty -Senate sub-committee has promised full consideration to the Assembly's constitution, there is no reason why the delegates cannot proceed with every confidence.

Some have said that student government will not work on our campus and that the administration will squelch any attempt on the students' part to have their own government. Since when have college students been unable to govern themselves? They're doing the job in universities all over the country. And there are certainly enough interested students at Nebraska who will do all in their power to see that we are not deprived of our own government. The administration certainly will not stand in the way if those students decide upon a government which is fair and representative.

Student government is definitely a "must." No one would enjoy a university in which the students are completely dominated by the administration. The Constitutional Assembly may or may not be the answer to the question. But if its work results in an honest, fair constitution, it Sciences auditorium. The occasion will undoubtedly be accepted.

The entire question stems back to those familiar words classes of musical theory. -student interest. If the students are sincerely interested in governing themselves, they can do the job. The first two days of the Assembly showed that there is student interest. We are confident that the remaining sessions will exhibit from music written by all the that same interest.

It is our hope that the delegates to the Assembly will return to their jobs tonight with the idea that representative student government is their main goal. If they do, our current problems of government should be solved.

Twelve Music Students Give Original Composition Recital

Ever tried to write a song? Or something slightly more complicated—say a marimba solo or an arrangement for string orchestra?

Twelve of the school of music students who tried were so successful that their compositions were chosen for performance at 4 p. m. Wednesday in the Social is the annual recital of original compositions by students

THE TWELVE selections which will be performed were selected students in classes in instrumentation, second year harmony, counterpoint and composition, and graduate classes in composition and advanced orchestration.

Four of the solos will be performed by their composers, Suzanne Koehler, Kathleen Forbes, Catherine Elliott and Lawrence Lee. In addition, Roma Johnson will play viola in the string orchestra which is performing her arrangement of Samuel's "A Carol" and Norman Todenhoft will play the clarinet part in his arrangement of a Jean-Jean "Etude" for that instrument and string quartet.

the Phi Mu Alpha-Sinfonia award, Pi Kappa Lambda awards went to Gwen McCormack for her vocal setting of the 25th psalm and to Mary Alice Snider for her French horn "Rondo." The "Rondo," incidentally, is a family affair, for husband Jack will play the solo part.
