Faculty Voices Approval Of Student Assembly

Attempt to Adjourn Fails; Committee Work Goes On

The faculty is strongly behind the Constitutional Assembly.

That was the essence of a statement made by chairman, Ted Sorensen, when the group re-convened last night.

Acting upon a resolution proposed at the assembly's final meeting last week, Sorensen and a committee of two others interviewed members of the faculty who have worked closely with students in student government.

Although the motion requested that the committee present its resolution to the Faculty Senate that body did not meet before the Assembly re-convened, Sorensen reported. The committee also attempted to present the resolution to the Faculty Senate committee on student organizations and social functions but it was not in session.

THE COMMITTEE then presented the resolution to four faculty members, Dr. Curtis Elliott, Dr. Mary Mielenz, Dean T. J. Thompson and Dean Borgmann. Sorensen presented a composite of the views expressed by the four persons.

"The Assembly has the complete support of the faculty members interviewed," he said.

Those we asked felt that the "Assembly is the best answer to the problem of student government, Sorensen reported.

"The faculty is looking to the Assembly to come up with the answer. If the Assembly will forget about the faculty and work out a fair constitution it will have the support of the faculty and be put to a student vote or approved by whatever means are most expedient," Sorensen said.

ALTHOUGH this announcement met with a round of applause, the applause was not unanimous. Winton Buckley, University party delegate, did not feel that the Assembly was fulfilling a useful function.

"We are groping in the dark. I don't think that in three days we can draft a better constitution than David Fellman, a political science authority, has drafted and that is the Constitution the Council

Cobs to Hold Rush Smoker On Thursday

All new candidates for pledge-ship in Corn Cobs are invited to attend a smoker tomorrow evening at 7:30.

Rod Lindwall, newly-elected president of the pep organization, announced that actives would receive the prospective workers at the Student Union, Parlors B and C. He said that the get-acquainted meeting was being held this spring in order that the service program would be under way when school opened next fall.

Workers, who successfully completed the work program this year, will be presented with the Cob emblem, said Lindwall. In addition, colored films, taken of last year's football games, will be shown.

Those men who have aspirations of wearing the red sweater with the Corn Cob emblem on the front will need to fill three primary qualifications. They must:

1. Be of sophomore standing. (24 to 55 hours completed by the end of this semester).
2. Be carrying at least 12 hours satisfactorily at the time of participation in Corn Cobs; and be credited with at least 12 hours for the previous semester in which enrolled in the University of Nebraska.
3. Have a weighted average of 4.5 (75) and also an average of 4.5 for the semester preceding initiation, first semester next fall.

Lindwall urged all unaffiliated men who can satisfy the above requirements to be present. He also asked all organized houses to send two representatives that would best represent the house. From this group will be chosen the new workers who will assist in planning for the Big 7 outdoor track meet and other activities that will occur yet this spring.

Lindwall expressed hope that workers' schedules for next year would permit time on Saturday mornings for work projects. Free time then would prove to the worker's advantage, he said.

Beside Lindwall, other Cob officers are: vice president, John Connolly; secretary, Rex Pettijohn; and treasurer, Neal Baxter. Col. C. J. Frankforter is the adviser and sponsor.

Trench Mouth Scare Sends Hundreds to Student Health

"All I ever got was trench mouth . . ."

The words of the familiar song mean a little more now to the some 300 University students who know positively after their visit to Student Health that they have the disease.

Until recently the words fusospirochetosis (ulceromembraneous stomatitis) might have been nothing more than competition with the name of a New England lake for greatest length. Trench mouth, its equivalent in a layman's vocabulary, had only a little more meaning.

NOW THE WHISPER of the words is enough to send happy cokers scurrying to see a University physician. Despite the fact that they were flocking to Student Health, a few people seemed to know much about the disease. They only were aware that people living in their houses had "it" and, becoming worried, wanted a checkup.

Students lined up outside greeted their friends with glad cries: "What are you doing here?" The one questioned would casually remark, "Oh I just dropped in . . ." Eventually the two were standing together and buying the 3% hydrogen peroxide and penicillin troches which are the basic treatment of the disease.

To questions, "What is it?" Dr. Samuel I. Fuenning, director of the Student Health Center has this to offer: Trench mouth is an infection of the gums caused by fusiform bacillus and spirochete. It spreads very rapidly and can cause considerable discomfort. The gums may be reddened and later purplish and covered with a membrane. Penicillin is effective in the treatment and, if properly treated, the infected mouth can be made clean in a few days.

NOTE the "if properly treated." Proper treatment means more than half taking of the pills your sister got when she went over and found she had the disease. It means going to the health center yourself and having your treatment directed by the physician in charge.

Student Health, busy with a great many people who actually did not have the disease, sends up a plea: If you have soreness in your mouth, come in for a check-up; otherwise you are probably all right and don't need attention.

If you don't have the disease and don't want to get it, there are several things you can do, like eating at places which have adequate sanitary facilities. You can avoid all close contact with other individuals, too. The Student Health suggestion blank mentions "common" drinking glass in particular, but—let's face it—close contact also means what everyone knows it means.

Student Health knows what it's doing, and you know just what you'll do about it.
