

A Horn Blows . . .

BLOW GABRIEL BLOW—Although Robert Chab, All-State music student, is neither cross-eyed nor frightened he is having a good time clowning for the camera man. He is also having a good time at the All-State Fine Arts Course for high school students. Bob's tuba is one of the many instruments used in the All-State band. In addition to playing in the band, Bob and students like him, take private lessons from University instructors. This is the 9th annual session of the All-State course. It is headed by David Foltz, of the university school of music. Some 256 students are registered for the Course. They receive instruction in speech and art as well as in music.

Dean Says Too Many Home Ec Students Marry

Why is there a nationwide shortage of women to fill jobs in home economic fields? Dean Ava B. Milam, head of home economics at Oregon State college, thinks she has the answer after questioning the 85 seniors to be graduated this spring from her school. She says the answer is earlier marriage.

Of the 85 seniors quizzed, 18 are already married and 19 plan to marry soon. That makes 43 percent of the graduates accounted for—though a few will take a professional job for a time even though married.

Add to these the increasing number of girls who are marrying early and leaving classes before their senior year—or not entering at all—and the shortage is still more understandable, she believes.

Not that Dean Milam is criticizing early marriage—that's another story—but she is concerned at the many openings for good positions that are destined to go unfilled unless more girls are graduated in home economics.

Nebraska Newspapermen Participate in News Clinics

The first in a series of Clinics in News Photography was held last week in Burnett Hall.

Newspapermen of Nebraska and surrounding areas interested in learning basic or more advanced methods of news photography are invited to attend the Clinics offered by the School of Journalism and the University Summer School.

These Clinics are arranged for three consecutive weekends. They are to run all day Friday and through noon Saturday and carry the study through progressive stages of news photography.

The first of the clinics dealt with the operation of news cameras; fundamentals in lighting with flood lamps, exposure, use of light meters, filters, film processing, contact printing, and enlarging.

The second, to be held June 17-18 will involve the use of the flash bulb in making news pictures. The light output and the techniques involved in understanding the proper use of different flash bulbs will be emphasized.

For the third period, June 24-25, provision is being made for the Lincoln newspapers to give demonstrations in multiple flash and instruction in photo news coverage and photo editing.

The clinics are held in graphic arts wing of Burnett Hall, Rooms B 5-7. Instruction is under the direction of Ray F. Morgan, assistant professor of Pictorial Journalism.

Fees for each clinic will be $5. Checks should be made payable to the University of Nebraska comptroller and sent to: Clinics in News Photography, School of Journalism, Lincoln, Nebraska.

Michigan Plunges To Victory

One of the classic "pep-talks" stories is told on Michigan's great football coach, "Hurry Up" Yost. Yost, as well as being a brilliant strategist, was a firm believer in dressing room oratory.

During half time of one important game, he pulled out all the stops in a fervent plea for victory. The players sat enthralled as Coach Yost poured it on.

"Go out that door to victory," the fiery coach screamed. So carried away was he that Yost pointed to the wrong door.

The Michigan players, fired to a fever pitch, dashed headlong into the swimming pool, and encumbered with heavy football gear, narrowly escaped drowning.
