

Psychiatrist to Discuss Personal Relationships at Religious Meeting

Dr. Janet Palmer, a psychiatrist, will be the special guest sharing in the discussion at the interdenominational student meeting this Sunday at 5:30 p. m. Personal relationships will be stressed this week, in the development of the theme for the summer, "Education for Failure."

The group will meet on the steps of the Student Union at 5:30 p. m. The meeting this Sunday will be in the YMCA lounge, in the Temple building, with the Congregational Student Fellowship serving as hosts.

Dr. Palmer, who was formerly on the staff of the Lincoln State Hospital, is a graduate of Oberlin College. Her medical and psychiatric training was received at Western Reserve University, Cleveland.

A successful program for all Christian students in the University has been carried on throughout the summer term. It is open to all interested students and faculty. The groups officially sponsoring the interdenominational program include Baptist, Congregational, Disciples of Christ, Episcopal, Evangelical and Reformed, Methodist, Presbyterian, YMCA and YWCA.

The program includes supper, worship, and a good discussion. All summer school students are welcome to the meeting this Sunday at 5:30, when personal relationships will be discussed.

Basin Agri . . .

its component and interdependent parts, the proposed agricultural program constitutes a basis for developing the watershed lands on a coordinate basis with the water resources of the Missouri river and its tributaries.

"The benefits of this program, together with the efforts of other federal and state development programs and with the efforts of the people of the basin, will accrue in the form of conservation of resources on more productive farms, ranches and forests, a fuller development of potential resources, and stability that comes from management of land to withstand adverse weather, drought and floods."

A modest man is usually admired—if people ever hear of him.

Polio Outlook Bleak for '49

The polio virus is striking farther and faster this year than last.

By the third week of June, 37 states had more cases than a year ago. The number of new cases each week was running about 10 per cent higher over the country.

This could signal the worst year yet for polio. Last year was the second worst in the country's history, with 27,894 new cases.

But there is no way to predict what will happen in the next few months, the most dangerous ones for epidemics. The rate might keep going faster and higher, or change suddenly.

The Public Health Service reported 2,309 cases by June 19, or 36 per cent more than last year at that time. But more than 900 of this year's cases were really hangover from 1948. They came from epidemics that began late last year, and which didn't die down until early this year.

One danger signal is that the virus is so widespread this year said Dr. Hart E. Van Piper, medical director of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

That means it may be spread easily to people who haven't been exposed to it in the last few years. The best medical guess is that it spreads by person to person contact.

An encouraging fact is that no statewide epidemics have appeared yet, such as swept North Carolina in 1948.

The picture in late June, Dr. Van Piper said, pointed to two potential danger areas.

One is a circle of Southern states — Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas, and Oklahoma. The rate this year is higher in all of them, and all but Texas escaped severe outbreaks last year. The second potential danger area is the Northeastern states, including New England. The rate is up in all those states except New York and New Hampshire.
