

Nebraskan Grid Experts Return; 3 New Faces

As the nation's football teams move into high gear, The Daily Nebraskan's football experts bring their crystal balls out of the closet to prepare for another year of selecting the winners of the regions and nation's top grid classics.

A trio of new names appear this year, replacing those of Bob Phelps, Lee Harris and Harold Abramson, who have since left the staff.

The new ones are: Harlan Beideck, former sports editor of The Daily Nebraskan and now sports writer for a local paper; Jerry Warren, now sports editor; and Jerry Ewing, news editor and a former assistant sports editor.

Returning as selectors are: Cub Clem, editor and former sports writer who won the contest last year; Fritz Simpson, managing editor and former sports editor, who placed second last season; and Jack Donovan of the University athletic publicity office.

The staff has made three policy rules regarding games to be picked: First, all games in which Big Seven schools are involved; second, no NU football game; and third, what we consider the biggest and most significant of the other college games.

Coeds to Begin Tennis Tourney

A doubles tennis tournament for women will be sponsored by the WAA starting Tuesday, October 4. It will not be an intramural tournament, but merely a chance for tennis enthusiasts to use the courts, and will also furnish WAA with names to use in the organization of a tennis club. A soccer-baseball tournament will begin Monday, October 3. All affiliated girls should sign up with their house representative. All unaffiliated girls interested in participation in the games should sign up at the WAA office.

MAIN FEATURES START

Bye to Pace Gopher's Air, Land Attack

Starting at left halfback for the Golden Gophers of Minnesota Saturday against Nebraska's Cornhuskers will be a 170 pound pack of dynamite known as Billy Bye.

Minnesota fans are hoping that this is the year when Bye will finally advance from second to first fiddle in the U of M's ball carrying department.

In 1947 Bye was Minnesota's top man in rushing, but Ev Faunce took the "total offense" honors by virtue of a wide margin in passing gains.

Last season Bye was heralded in pre-season prognostication as "one of the best running backs in the nation," but suffered a sprained ankle in the schedule opener against Washington and missed offensive action in the next three tilts. Even though he came back strong in later games, baby-faced Bill had a total net gain of 471 yards compared to 707 yards credited to Faunce.

Faunce has served out his college competition and is not around this season. While there are some promising sophomore halfbacks in the Gopher folds, it's clearly up to Bye to "carry the load" for the Big Ten title contender this fall. Gopher Coach, Bernie Bierman has gone so far as to refer to Billy as "Our offense." Bye got off on the right foot Saturday when he ran and passed against Washington for 120 yards.

And so it all boils down to this: If Billy Bye is able to play through the season, he may well finish at the top of the Minnesota ground gaining department.

And when the Gophers invade Huskerland Saturday, you can be sure that Bye will be out for plenty of additional yardage and could cause the Huskers to have a long afternoon.

First roommate: "What do you do with your clothes when you wear them out?"

Second roommate: "Wear them back home again, of course."
