We, Too, Have a Plan...

The lead story today tells of a great reorganization of faculty-administration committees dealing with student affairs.

And it looks as if the students have had it again. Especially as regards student publications.

Under the new program, five faculty members and three students will form the sub-committee on student publications. Formerly the pub board consisted of three faculty members and three students with Dr. W. F. Swindler, director of the school of journalism in charge. Under the reorganization plan, Dr. R. V. Shumate of the Arts and Sciences college will be chairman.

Formerly it was said the board knew very little about student publication. The new board looks like anything but an improvement.

Some wag has said: "The faculty knows nothing about the problems of student publications; the student members of the board know even less." Judging from past experiences, he has hit the nail on the head.

We are not casting aspersions as to the ability and earnestness of the Pub Board members—just as to their first-hand knowledge of journalism in general and student publications in particular. With the new board, it appears that the selection of a new staff at the end of the semester will be even more of a "by-guess-and-by-golly" matter.

We realize the need of a publications board to check on finances and allied operational problems. But when five faculty and three students get together to pick a staff for publications they know little about, we balk.

We have thought of a little plan of our own. You can't tell, some soul might listen to it.

1. Let the sub-committee on student publications serve as a check on finances, policy, etc.
2. Set up an auxiliary sub-committee to pick the new staffs. On this committee would be the outgoing and incoming editors or business managers, depending on which staff was being selected, Dr. Swindler, who as director of the journalism school should know and have a hand in what happens to the various publications, and Dean T. J. Thompson, who seems to want his hand in everything anyway.

This auxiliary group would know who has done the best work, who deserves promotion and what policy changes would help the paper. The obvious charge that politics would enter in is ridiculous when one considers that the three student members on the new sub-committee will vote as a block anyway. Our system would be an improvement and business managers had just a little to say about who here.

And, lastly, it would be very, very nice if the editors knew who was going to work for them.

Theos John Thompson, are you listening?

No Spiking at Willamette

At Willamette University measures have been taken to provide uniform punishments for cheating.

Any student caught spiking will be brought before the discipline committee instead of his instructor. By doing this the college hopes to uniform the control of cheating.

'Rag' Analyzes Council; 19 Groups Represented

The Student Council is cast. All nineteen authorized student organizations have now elected their representatives to the 1949-50 governing body.

Business Meeting

First official business meeting of the governing body will be held Wednesday, Oct. 5, from 4-6 p. m. That meeting will institute the Council's scheduled weekly two-hour meetings. Members will go to work on the group's dual purpose for the year: regular business and a new or revised Council constitution.

A dinner which had been scheduled for this evening was canceled when it was learned that Chancellor Gustavson had been called to Washington. The Chancellor was to have been the main speaker at the dinner, which was planned to introduce new and old Council members. The dinner will be held when the Chancellor returns from Washington.

The final results show that the Council will be made up of eight women and fifteen men, counting the four holdover members. Seven members are unaffiliated students and the remaining seven are members of fraternities or sororities.

College Representation

The twenty-three representatives, though elected entirely as representatives of selected campus groups, can be classified to the following colleges: Agriculture, 3; Arts and Sciences, 9; Engineering, 4; Business Administration, 1; Teachers, 3; Graduate, 1; and Law, 2.

Colleges and schools not represented by the new method include, Dentistry, Pharmacy, School of Fine Arts and School of Journalism.

Comparison

In the past years of the Council, representation was offered only on a college basis. A comparison of the results this year and the openings announced last spring for the council show these similarities and differences:

Fast System Present Method

AG:	2 men, one woman	2 men, one woman
A & S:	3 men, one woman	4 men, five women
Law:	one man	2 men
Teachers:	one man, 2 women	one man, 2 women
Grad:	one man, one woman	one man
Eng:	3 men	4 men
Busad:	3 men	one man
Fine Arts:	one man, one woman	(none)
Jour:	one man	(none)
Dent:	one man	(none)
Phar:	one man	(none)

Under the old plan, the Council was to have 22 members, plus a senior-at-large and four holdover members. This year's Council will have 23 members, though there may be further additions when applications of several groups are considered.

New Members

The '49-50 Council was planned to chose representatives on the basis of campus organizations "cutting across college lines" and affiliations. The new members are delegates from the following groups:

YMCA	Harry Kenyon
YWCA	Alice Jo Smith

15 Month Receipt For Books Given at Rutgers

The college bookstore at Rutgers University is once again acting as agent for students who wish to sell any textbooks.

Under this plan the student takes his books to the bookstore and exchanges his books for a receipt that is good for fifteen months. Any time during this period he can have his books returned or receive money from books sold.

A ten percent charge is levied by the bookstore for rendering this service.

French Programs A Burnett Feature

French language students are reminded of the French radio programs that are received once a week over a short-wave radio in 322 Burnett.

The programs are received every Wednesday afternoon from New York (Voice of America), Montreal, Switzerland and Africa.

Stations in France are too weak to be heard regularly in this section of the country, and when these stations are picked up by short-wave students will be notified.

Members of the French department worked during the summer session to set up the powerful short-wave receiving station in Burnett.

Red Cross Driver Courses Opening

"Red Cross doesn't share the public's antagonism toward women drivers," according to Lois Rodin, motor corps chairman.

In fact Red Cross feels kindly toward all drivers and potential drivers, she added. Kindly enough to offer the use of the Red Cross station wagon to all students who enroll in the motor corp's training program.
