From the Union

By Marilyn Moomey and Hugh Fulmer

Next Saturday will see the last dance at the Union until the holidays. To make this affair more attractive to the students, the dance committee has decided to continue a traditional event. Since the annual turkey race has been discontinued, the feature of the dance will be the giving away of a bird. We wonder if the name "Turky Trot" indicates the method for giving the gobbler away.

It's rumored that some of the AUF Auction debts will be paid off Saturday by the use of the Theta and Alpha Chi pledge classes as waitresses.

Bill Plank, Jo Leaming and Dorothy Kurth had their hands full this week end as the Independent Student association took over the Union for their Regional Conference. Duane Lake, Director of the Union, drew on some of his past experiences in his feature speech on "Campus Service." The success of the conference was due to the able planning and management of Paul Rieter and Betty Carrol.

Something to look forward to next week will be the University symphony with Dorothea Powers as soloist. Here is your chance to hear an outstanding young artist at no charge—compliments of the Union Activities committee.

For those of you who like the lighter side of life, dress up in your plaid shirts and cotton dresses and come to the Square Dance lessons on Thursday. You know it's quite the rage in Hollywood. Instructions are under the direction of Harold George, president of the newly formed Square Dance club.

In closing we leave you with this parting thought, drop in at the Union anytime. There is always something going on.

Bachelor Filing

The names of all those who apply for Eligible Bachelor will appear on the election ballot. Eight will be chosen from these candidates at an all women's election.

Where Was Harry???

Time: 3:48 p.m. Saturday.
Place: before a radio, listening to the NU-Iowa State football game.

Thought: where in hell was Harry Meginnis in 1946, 1947, and 1948?

Bill Glassford deserves much credit in his first year of coaching Nebraska's football team. One of the best things we see in him is his ability to get the best out of every man. The Meginnis case is an excellent example of what I mean.

Meginnis just didn't seem to be good enough for Bernie Materson's "T" attack in 1946 or 1947. He didn't make the grade with "Potsy" Clark. But Glassford saw enough in him to invite him to Curtis for pre-school drills and keep him on the varsity.

If the "loyal" Cornhusker fans, and I refer to particularly to students and the strong alumni groups who for the past four years have made life miserable for NU coaches, want any proof that Bill Glassford is a good football coach, they need only observe what he has done with players who were disregarded by his predecessors.

Glassford has done better with substantially the same players than either of the two preceding coaches. That, at least for 1949, is good enough for us.

Letterip

Dear Mr. Editor:

It was during my first semester at Nebraska that I became acquainted with the term "fair-weather Cornhusker." Obviously it is not a complimentary phrase to have attached to a student or a student body.

Last weekend, approximately 1,000 Cornhuskers pulled up stakes and migrated eastward. They were intent upon seeing the Scarlet and Cream defeat "the best Iowa State team since 1938," quoting the "Iowa State Daily." It was a very cold afternoon, and it seemed like the rains might fall at any minute. It was definitely not a good day to watch a football game. And yet, when the Husker team made its appearance, our fans let out a yell which the Staters seldom equalled that afternoon.

Before the final gun had been fired, much had passed which must have raised the reputation of our university a great deal. To be sure, the team played a game that all can be proud of. The sports writers have all payed tribute to them. But, I feel that praise should go to the Yell squad, who, despite the rain, the mud and the cold, kept yelling from the start to finish.

You can bet your coats that as far as Iowa State is concerned there is no such thing as a "fair-weather Cornhusker."

Sincerely,
Roz Howard
