For Meritorious Service . . .

"For meritorious service in promoting the welfare and spirit of the University of Nebraska, The Daily Nebraskan cites . . ."

These words, placed on two certificates, will honor the semester's work of a member of the University administration or faculty and a University student. The two recipients will be selected by The Daily Nebraskan staff after names have been nominated by students and faculty members.

The winners of the citation will be announced in the last issue of the semester on Jan. 13.

Members of the faculty and student body are urged to make their nominations as soon as possible. The nominations should be accompanied by a few paragraphs explaining why the nomination was made. These nominations may be sent through campus mail to The Daily Nebraskan and should be in the editor's office before Wednesday, Jan. 11.

The awards, two a semester, will become a regular feature in The Daily Nebraskan for years to come. Last spring, Editor Norm Leger selected two senior students, Jerry Johnston and Phyl Harris, to receive similar awards. The field is being broadened this semester to permit a wider field of selection.

No member of The Daily Nebraskan staff is eligible for the award.

Student Returns to UN In Dazed Condition

"Happy New Year" shouted Murgatroyd as the bell rang. Then, partially recovering from the sudden attack of somnambulism he remembered that it was the alarm calling him to his Tuesday 9 o'clock.

Today I'll wow em, he decided as he stumbled toward the wash room. After three attempts with the razor he decided tomorrow would be a more appropriate day to try out the new additions to his wardrobe and settled with only one more "shaving mishap."

Food Tastes Odd.

"My, this tastes odd," he snorted as he tried to down his breakfast. Just then Joel, the house tectoteller and authority on life in general bounced in his usual conversational mood. And now for my quart of milk, Joel announced self-righteously.

"And what has happened to you Murgatroyd?" he demanded ruthlessly, "as if I didn't know." "Well, as I always say" . . . Never mind what you always say, talking boy," our friend scowled, "it was nice while it lasted." "Well, well now, the proof of the pudding is in the eating, as I always say, "but this was lost to posterity as Murgatroyd made a hasty exit.

Returns from Classes.

Our scene now shifts to our hero as he returns after two classes, one thought and one alone in mind. Oh that beautiful, lovely, soft, little old bed. I guess I'll just oversleep the rest of today's classes.

Then, oh misery of miseries, he stepped right into a bridge game. Before he knew what new misfortune had befallen him he was sorting his cards. "O-h---, not even a good start on a canasta. And no wild cards, what kind of a deck is this." Bridge, stupid, retorted friend Joel in a worldly air. Hours later, 45 minutes to be exact, he stumbled upstairs. Oh, don't be phlegmatic demanded Joel, in a voice notably higher than his usual solemnity. "Don't be legmatic, my legs feel fine," Murgatroyd replied, in a desperate attempt to keep his self control and seem indifferent.

He reached his room, found the bunk, and today lapsed into yesterday.

Lost Articles Await Claim in West Stadium

Where can a University student look for a lost article? That seems to be a question that few students can answer.

An all-campus lost and found department is maintained by the University in the West Stadium in the Stores A department, which is the office and custodial supplies division. Articles lost on the campus or in any building on campus may be claimed in this department.

According to Charles Moore, head of the department, less than 25 percent of all the articles turned in to the office each year are ever claimed by the owners.

In August each year, says Moore, all items of clothing which have not been claimed by someone are turned over to various welfare organizations, usually the Salvation Army. Classroom books which have been unclaimed are given to the bookstores for use. No money is received for the goods, but all are disposed of.

When a student loses an article in any building on campus, if it found by the janitor, it will be

Iowa State Lauds NU Migrators

The behavior of Nebraska students at the Nebraska-Iowa football game was complimented by Harold E. Pride, director of the Union at Iowa State, in a letter to Duane Lake.

Pride stated that he had been told repeatedly that they have had few delegations of students from other campuses in their building and around the campus who have made the impression that was made by the Nebraska students.

Pride further stated that they were perfect ladies and gentlemen and the best possible kind of advertisers of Nebraska that the university could enjoy.

turned in that day to the lost and found department in the West Stadium. This is the only place the article may be claimed.

Most items received at the department, Moore points out, are usually large ones. Very little jewelry is turned in, he claims, and about the only small goods are cheap pens or pencils.
