BY DICK WALSH Seward, Alaska, had 17 feet of snow last week and that is below our expectations.

College of Agriculture professors have their troubles, R. A. Olson, assistant in agronomy, had a little interruption in his agronomy 53 (soils) class last week.

Ag Y.M.C.A. is currently leading the pack of Ag college intramural basketball teams. Their Paul Fenske has been doing most of the scoring.

The College of Agriculture is to be recognized in the near future, Mary Chase and Rex Crom of the Ag Exec board visited Dean Lambert last Saturday with regard to the recognition.

And then the "feminine pulchritude" of Loomis hall comes thru with the workings of a "thoroughbred" popcorn variety which delivers the dripping tidbits ready popped, buttered, salted and sacked.

Models...

Jensen, Mary Gurlock and Donna Rudisil model garments they have made.

"Feminine follies" will be the theme song of date dresses as they are modeled by Delilah Holstein, Annette Carnahan, Esther Schoen, Marcia Adams, Mary Ann Grundman, Betty Christy, Jane Carter, Bonnie Washington, Dot Bowman, Carol Higgins, Annette Stoppokte, Sally Hartz, Elaine Lauer and Janet Pierce.

Commentators for the show will be Peg McGeachin, Donna Schroeder, Marilyn Nuss and Jean Fenster.

Tickets go on sale Thursday for the show. They are available from Home Ec council members. Booths will be set up Tuesday and Wednesday in the Ag union and in the Home Economics building.

Council...

Don Stern moved that the Council adopt a plan setting up a system of a fixed sex ratio guaranteeing women no more than seven seats on the Council, with both sexes voting only for their own sex.

To this motion Rod Lindwall replied, "I would hate to vote on any motion which would deprive women on this campus of the joys of politics."

Betty Green presented Panhellenic's view of women in politics by saying, "Panhellenic is in favor of any kind of parties."

Another opinion was stated thus: "The report has come back from the party girls that they have a party. If there are fixed sex ratios it will remove the necessity of girls organizing into a party."

Bob Raun stated, "If the women don't want to organize political parties, I say let them stay clear out of politics and the Student Council."

Similar views were expressed by Council members such as, "With fixed sex ratios girls could get out of political parties," and "As long as girls keep their hands off politics, they should keep them entirely off."

Student Health Center Offers Varied Types of Treatment

Many students on the campus are unaware of the facilities that are offered them at their Student Health Center.

The Center, located in temporary building "D," is facilitated to conduct practically any type of diagnostic treatment.

Three full time doctors are employed by the center besides a staff of registered nurses. Specialists in practically every field of medicine are at the center from two hours a day to two hours a week.

Troubled Asia pondered the import of a Russian-Red China pact binding the 700 million inhabitants of the world's two biggest Communist nations

The treaty, signed in Moscow by Russian Foreign Minister Vishinsky and Communist Chinese Foreign Minister Chou Enlai is aimed at curbing "aggression" by Japan and all foreign powers "directly or indirectly" connected with Japan.

At present, the United States, Britain, Nationalist China and Russia occupy Japan.

The pact was the result of two months of negotiation in Moscow and was aimed at strengthening the economic and cultural ties of Russia and Red China.

It provides for a Russian loan of 300 million dollars to China over the next five years to be used for the purchase of machinery and supplies from Russia.

The pact also provides that in two years Russia will hand over the Red Chinese and South Manchurian Railway, now operated by the Russians.

Speculation from all parts of the world centered on supposed secret features of the treaty not officially announced. Did the Russians put the squeeze on the Chinese Reds in secret while on the surface granted favors to the Red Chinese?

The political and security committee will meet the problem of establishing a UN police force as provided for in the charter and increasing the force in power and size.

The trusteeship committee will consider making South West Africa a trust territory. A hypothetical proposal which this committee might also consider will be made by Russia or one of the satellites that the U. S. trusteeship agreement for the Pacific islands be amended so that the United States could not use the islands for military bases.

The model United Nations general assembly will convene for its first plenary session on Friday afternoon, March 17. The keynote speaker for the conference will address the delegates this afternoon and work will be assigned to the four committees.

On Wednesday, March 23, delegates will attend the plenary session which will set off three days of debate and voting on the issues which come out of the committee meetings.

The three conference speakers will be announced in The Daily Nebraskan in the near future. Ted Sorenson will act as chairman for the conference plenary sessions. Sorenson also presided last year at the meetings of the mock UNESCO conference.

Interested women students at Ag College may join the organization at that time. Booths will be set up at the Ag union and in the Home Ec building on the two days schedule.

UN Assembly...

Discussion of the question of resources will involve such issues as what resources are available for development, the cost, where the funds will come from and technical knowledge necessary for such a project.

Expansion of Indonesia's trade relations may involve these problems: (1) Formation of a South East Asia customs union, (2) encouragement of urban industrial development, (3) land tenure, (4) promotion of self sufficiency and (5) promotion of the flow of food from surplus areas to deficit areas.

Continuance of Indonesian exports of vital materials will concern a possible clash between maintenance of exports and land redistribution. It may also bring up the problem of cartization and price and the question of balance of payment.

The fourth possible issue, resettlement of population, would bring up for debate such matters as treatment of primitive population, adaptability of surplus population to the areas of deficit population, land tenure and the problem of determining which groups should be moved to new areas.

The Indonesian issue will be turned over to the economic and finance committee at the mock assembly next March. Lois Nelson is chairman for the committee, and Bill Dugan will act as vice chairman.

Three other UN committees will be working at the time of the conference. They are: political and security; social, humanitarian and cultural and trusteeship.

The political and security committee will meet the problem of establishing a UN police force as provided for in the charter and increasing the force in power and size.

The trusteeship committee will consider making South West Africa a trust territory. A hypothetical proposal which this committee might also consider will be made by Russia or one of the satellites that the U. S. trusteeship agreement for the Pacific islands be amended so that the United States could not use the islands for military bases.

Student Stigma...

Procrastination, one of the biggest stigmas on the face of a college career, is responsible more than any one thing for poor grades and poor mental health of the college students.

One of the most familiar types of procrastination which the students indulge is the habit of cramming. The student puts off reading the reference work that the professor has assigned, or he neglects to read the text material. Then before he knows it, the term is drawing to a close, and there is but one thing to do, cram.

While the habit of cramming is an old college practice, it is certainly one of the most harmful and senseless. It is generally agreed by physicians and scholars that a student can not do his best work after staying up all night cramming with the coffee pot and benzedrine tablets by his side.

The result, then, of a man who stays up cramming is quite disastrous when he enters the classroom the morning after such a session. The student's brain is clouded from the need of sleep, and the things that have been hashed over during the night are not clear and concise in the mind as they should and could be with efficient study methods.

Another practice equally as familiar as cramming is the student who puts off writing his papers until the last minute. It seems strange that college students are so extremely proficient in this line. They tell themselves that the end of the quarter is far away and what is the use of starting a paper now.

The result is the same as in cramming, the paper is poorly written, and the trend of thought is broken or garbled. The professor isn't fooled either, for it isn't hard to tell the paper that has had weeks of preparation and research and the one that has had only a few days or hours.

So take stock in yourself, "for time waits for no man." —Daily Utah Chronicle.

Wanted: A Job...

(Editor's note: The following item is an excerpt from the Georgia Tech student newspaper, The Technique.) There is one course which vitally concerns all of us that is not being taught at Georgia Tech. Its name might be "How to Obtain a Job."

Students generally begin to talk earnestly about the job situation as they enter their senior year. One hears stories about declining salaries, laying-off of workers and over-crowded fields. All of this spells UNCERTAINTY, and uncertainty can only be overcome with knowledge.

To be more specific, I propose a course to be taught by the psychological department, since it should be approached from the psychological viewpoint. It would teach being positive; that is, it would present scientific methods of choosing a definite company in a particular field, of picking the exact job in that company and of proving one's usefulness to the company in that job.

In short, the man who knows what he wants and goes after it has a tremendous advantage over the man who does not. Even if no credit were given and the class met only once a week, the principals to be learned from such a course might eventually prove to be more beneficial than many of the others, because they can not only be applied to job-hunting but also to every pursuit in life.

Kenton Tickets Low for Students

Reduced student ticket prices of $1.20 for the Stan Kenton concert are only effective if purchased before the performance, according to Wendy Gauger, ticket sales chairman.

The 60-cent reduction is offered to students only and are on sale in Ag and city union offices and booths and in the Social Science building.

General admission the night of the performance, Feb. 22, will be $1.80.

Gauger advises students to buy their tickets early, both to insure admission to the concert and for the 60-cent savings.

Which Little Egg Went to Market

A research project on the effect of eggs taken to market from farm storage is being studied at the University.

Researchers say the project has particular significance because of government egg purchases under the price support program.

Co-operating in the project are Agricultural Engineer, F. D. Yung, Poultry Husbandryman, I. L. Williams and J. W. Goble, marketing specialist.

The researchers said they will study the problems of sweating, which occurs when eggs are subjected to temperature change. The bacterial infection of clean and dirty eggs also will be investigated.

Editorial Briefs

Nebraska's 81-year old history reflects a vivid picture of the growth and change of education throughout the country. In the 1870's, when the University first saw the light of day, enrollment never surpassed 67 students.

A part of the current courtesy campaign, but a big part, is being emphasized by Lincoln citizens who have opened their doors to entertain foreign students. Lincolnites have always been hospitable to our overseas students, however, and the stress on courtesy has merely drawn attention to their generosity and kindness.

Grade books would be filled with a lot of red marks if every instructor gave a pop quiz on what is going on in the world today. Keeping up on the news could be more than a full-time job, and very few University students even take time to scan the headlines in the daily newspaper.

"Nobody cares about student government except us radicals." Those were the words of a senior holdover member of last spring's Student Council prior to the disbandment of the organization. Since that time, it seems to us, the three "radicals" referred to have been joined by a number of other University students interested in student government.

It could happen here—and has in the past. That's why the recent episode at Colorado university where Orrin Tucker broke a contract to play at a college dance has significance at NU. A similar "deal" took place on this campus last fall when Tony Pastor broke a contract for the Homecoming dance.

Charity on the University of North Carolina campus got mixed up recently with a charitable Mother Nature. The charity group on campus decided to spark interest in a collection by electing a "Miss Campus Chest."

Instructor Uses Honor System

Following the practice of Law college Sumner J. House, political science instructor, employed the much-discussed honor system on a recent examination.

He instructed his Political Science class on the rudiments of the system and gave one of the students the exams. Leaving half the class with this student, he took the other half of the class into another room to take the exam by themselves, too.

Fraternity Mother Talks to Home Ec

Mrs. Frances Pelton, house mother of Farm Home fraternity, will address members of the Home Economics club Thursday at 5 p. m.

The club will meet in the social parlors of the Home Economics building.

Students Back British Doctor

The Czech radio declared Sunday that all British students studying at Prague's Charles university had signed a proclamation supporting Dr. Arna Rides in condemning the British Council as a tool of the "hostile" policy of the British Foreign Office.

The radio claimed that the students, who were there on scholarships, expressed approval of Dr. Rides' action in quitting her job as medical advisor to the British Council, a cultural group. They also expressed approval of her asking the Communist-led government to let her remain here and continue her work in behalf of the country.

The number of students involved was not told. Dr. Rides resigned from the British Council last Saturday. She said that she was doing so because she had become convinced that "the future certainly lies on this side."
