THE UNIVERSITY of Nebraska baseball team will have plenty of opportunity to get in some preseason hitting practice in the new batting cage in Nebraska's Field House. The cage is divided into two compartments which are 80 feet long, 15 feet wide, and 15 feet high. The cord net is attached a framework of steel tubing and can be raised to the ceiling of the field house when not in use.

Each compartment has a raised pitching mound and a regulation home plate.
