

Wet Reception . . .

Koehler to Lead T.C. Committee

Susan Koehler is the new chairman of the Teacher's College advisory committee. The new advisory committee, headed by Miss Koehler met with outgoing and carryover members at a luncheon Tuesday noon.

Dean Henzlik outlined the aims of the group and explained the mechanics of procedure. Each department in Teacher's College is represented by a member of the committee.

New members include; Marcia Bekins, Jaunita Hargarty, Phyllis Haley and Eugene Berg, who will serve as publicity chairman. The president of the graduate club is also a member of the committee.

Wilbur King Places First At Drill Meet

Cadet Sgt. Wilbur King was Nebraska's only first place winner in the annual Pershing Rifle regimental drill meet held at Iowa State college Friday and Saturday.

King won first place in the individual sophomore competition over the representatives of eight other colleges. Cadet Sgt. Robert Munger placed second in individual pledge competition, while Cadet Pfc. Robert Massey was third in individual freshman competition. The Nebraska crack squad placed second and the crack platoon and the IDR squad, both third.

A company of 24 men, under the command of Cadet Capt. Gerald Lembrich, represented Nebraska at the drill meet. Major James Pearson, faculty sponsor, and two representatives of national headquarters, Brig. Gen. William Mook, and Lt. Col. James Tighe, attended the regimental assembly.

The men flew to the drill meet in two C-47 national guard planes. The nine companies in the regiment are: the University, Iowa university, University of Wisconsin, University of South Dakota, University of Minnesota, North Dakota State college, Iowa State college, Superior State college and North Dakota university.

Skip Day . .

The weeks activities started with a convocation in the Union ballroom Tuesday morning. Speakers were Chancellor R. G. Gustavson, Alumni Secretary Secretary William Day and Senior Class president Bill Mueller.

Alum Value. The purpose of the convocation was to instill the idea of class spirit into the Senior Class as a group and to make students realize their value to the University as alumni members.

Day, former football coach at Nebraska, told the seniors of their duty to the University and the Alumni association after graduation. He urged all seniors to become active members of the association.

The Senior Week has been planned by the newly formed Senior council headed by Rod Lindwall.

Stanford Campus Leaves NSA

Stanford University has withdrawn from the National Students association because of the high cost of operating the local NSA committee.

Students body representatives felt that the $1,294 spent during the current school year was too much for the benefits gained from it. The main expenses were the traveling expenses for conventions which are considered to be among the most important functions of NSA.

Students expressed the belief that though NSA does a "great job" in helping build student organization in the smaller colleges, well-established student bodies did not derive comparable benefits.

Students Aid Flood Rescue Workers

The worst Lincoln flood in 42 years hit the city last night and helping in the rescue work were many University students. Members of the Red Cross College Unit and individual volunteers joined with city, state and national Red Cross disaster workers to care for the people left homeless by the flood.

Several students worked all last night evacuating flood victims and caring for those rescued. Bob Mosher, president of the college unit, was busy all night transporting, by trucks, cots and other emergency equipment from the University to the temporary Red Cross headquarters at Park School, 8th and F streets.

Web Emory, swimming instructor at the University and Lincoln High School, also helped the evacuation workers during the entire night.

All day Tuesday workers at Park School were caring for the homeless. In a call to The Daily Nebraskan, Jan Lindquist, vice president of the RCCU, reported that she and four other coeds were presently serving food and taking care of the flood victims. Miss Lindquist issued a plea for all students with free time Wednesday to offer their services to the Red Cross. "All help will be appreciated, from stenographers to laborers," Miss Lindquist said.

Coed Workers

A few of the duties Miss Lindquist and the other girls were doing were folding blankets, making sandwiches and other food for the homeless, caring for the children, distributing clothing and serving in any other way inches of precipitation by noon Tuesday.

At least 100 families were made homeless in southwest Lincoln by the flood. Most of these were cared for at Park school and according to Vernon Zimmerman, director of the Nebraska Red Cross, "no cases of a serious nature" had reported to the emergency hospital ward. Helping them in rescue work

Salt Creek's Rampage Drives Many Homeless

At 2:30 a.m. the city is usually asleep. Such was not the case Tuesday.

While a good many of Lincoln's residents were dry, warm and comfortable, others were flooded from their homes. While most were resting comfortably on their beds, some were perched uncomfortably on rooftops, their beds underwater. Salt Creek again had risen.

This writer, hearing broadcasts of the disaster, found hundreds of the city's population grouped together at the edge of the flood, less than half a mile from 13th and South street. Rescue squads, newspapermen and homeless families provided a vocal undercurrent to the persistent swirl of the waters a few feet away.

Stranded on Roofs The night air was chilly and the rising waters merely added to the dampness. Toward the west, all that could be seen was an endless valley of water. The silence of the night, usually penetrated only by an occasional train-whistle, was spasmodically broken by distant, plaintive sounds. Upon asking, this writer found that the sounds were the cries of families stranded on the roofs of houses, thousands of feet away.

One man told of earlier driving down a near-flooded country road. About three miles from Lincoln, he turned back to see the entire road behind him a swirling sea. Realizing his folly, he parked his car on the highest point available and set off cross-country toward town. He said that he expected to find his car in a week, probably demolished and resting in the foot of a ravine.

Worse than '40. Reports of first-hand observers differed as to the extent of the flood. One man, a resident of "lower Lincoln" for nearly 40 years, remarked that it was the highest that he had ever seen Salt Creek. "It's way above '42," he said. He was referring to 1942 when, at about the same time of the year, Salt Creek again went on a rampage.

Another observer, a young laborer, was serving as a member of the rescue squad. Using a motor boat, he was trying to reach the furthest homes under water. He admitted it was impossible to get to the stranded families. "The water's just too fast," he said. "The current and the logs in the water are too dangerous for a boat to get any place." He added that he noticed numerous livestock in the water, especially goats.

According to radio station KLMS, which certainly deserves praise for staying on the air the entire night, the waters were rising. According to most of the newspapermen and rescue-men, the waters were receding.

It made no difference. Salt Creek had done its damage.

Contest To Pick Ugliest Tar Hel

Newest contest to hit the University of North Carolina is the "Ugliest Man on Campus" contest sponsored by Theta Chi fraternity.

To enter the contest, male students simply make themselves up to look as ugly as possible and have their pictures taken. Grease paint and make-up, not facial expression will count in selecting the winner, who will receive a date with Miss Modern Venus and an evening complete with steaks and an orchid.

The contest has the backing of one of the oldest clubs on campus—the Ugly club, which was formed almost as soon as the doors of the University were opened and until an unfortunate incident occurred it was one of the leading campus organizations. It was forced to disband, however, when its members set off a keg of dynamite in an instructor's home and blew up the house.

Swindler to Head Kappa Tau Alpha

Dr. William F. Swindler, director of the University School of Journalism, has been elected to a two-year term as president of Kappa Tau Alpha, national scholastic honorary in journalism. The organization has chapters in 23 universities.

NU Meds Plan Final Meeting

Dr. James E. M. Thomson, nationally known orthopedic surgeon, will be the speaker for the final Nu-Med meeting of the year.

The meeting will be held in Room 315 of the Union, Wednesday, May 10, at 7:30 p. m. Election of officers for the fall term will be conducted.

Dr. Thomson, president of several medical groups, including the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons, the Clinical Orthopedic society, the American Association of Railway Surgeons and the Nebraska State Medical association, is the author of nearly 75 publications appearing in different medical journals. He is also editor of several books on orthopedic surgery.

Dr. Thomson's topic will be "Trends in Medicine Behind the Iron Curtain." He returned recently to this country from a medical teaching mission to Czechoslovakia, Poland and Finland under the auspices of the Unitarian service committee and the United Nations.

Arnold Krause, vice-president of Nu-Med society, urged all pre-medical, pre-laboratory technician and pre-nursing students to attend.

NU Flying Club To Hold Election

University Flying club will hold their last meeting of the year tonight at 7:15 p. m. in the Union. The summer flying fee of $50 will be arranged and election of new officers will be held.

Members of the club intend to fly during the summer at Union airport.

There are 22 members in the club at the present time. Laren Schmidt is the president of the organization.

J-3 Piper Cubs are the planes used by the group. The flying fee is $2.75 per hour.

Georgia Man Tape Records Class Notes

A talking notebook is a big help when examinations roll around at Emory university in Georgia, according to Jeff Abraham, senior psychology major.

Instead of a notebook of scrawled class notes, Abraham assembles a neat file of tape recordings of significant lectures. Then he just lies back and listens.

"It's a streamlined way to cram for exams," he admits, "but recorded lectures have their drawbacks. I don't find time to listen to all 45 hours of class over again—and the professor is sure to ask us about something I didn't replay."

Abraham declared that the tape recorder is most valuable in playing back the lectures the same evening, and in helping him to understand the work better.

Teachers do not object to the machine in the classroom. They are interested, and are anxious to listen to their own recordings. Abraham can pick up the professor's voice from the front row. His machine weighs only 15 pounds and holds a reel of tape that records for two hours silently. The tape can be erased by simply recording over it.

"Perhaps the recorder could attend class for me when I want a cut, but I haven't tried that," says Abraham. "Sometimes, however, I do catch a little sleep. I know I can hear the lecture served as toastmistress. Flowers for the tables were a gift of the later."

EMERGENCY CANTINE—Flood victims were given food by the Red Cross at the Park school. University students were on hand to assist the organization in flood relief.

The other coeds are Carol Shepman, Marge Schmid, Doree Cannady and Pal Dishner. According to George D. Gates, national Red Cross safety service, most of the work now being done by the Red Cross and other workers is taking care of the homeless. Rehabilitation will come later Gates said.

Temporary housing has been set up in the school and nearby homes. Any persons with available beds or clothing for the homeless should contact Gates at the school. The flood, which claimed 11 lives, was blamed on heavy rains swelling the Big Blue river and Turkey, Salt and Antelope creeks.

Water reached a climax in Lincoln Tuesday morning with the highest Salt Creek measurement at 22nd and Theresa, registering 42.3 feet at 10 a. m. By noon Tuesday it had receded to 41.2.

100 Homeless Families The crest of the flood then started south and Ashland and the lowlands between Ashland and Lincoln received serious flooding from Salt Creek.

The rains began Monday night about 3 p. m. and lasted most of the night. Lincoln received 1.17 inches of precipitation by noon Tuesday.

At least 100 families were made homeless in southwest Lincoln by the flood. Most of these were cared for at Park school and according to Vernon Zimmerman, director of the Nebraska Red Cross, "no cases of a serious nature" had reported to the emergency hospital ward. Helping them in rescue work

The night air was chilly and the rising waters merely added to the dampness. Toward the west, all that could be seen was an endless valley of water. The silence of the night, usually penetrated only by an occasional train-whistle, was spasmodically broken by distant, plaintive sounds. Upon asking, this writer found that the sounds were the cries of families stranded on the roofs of houses, thousands of feet away.

One man told of earlier driving down a near-flooded country road. About three miles from Lincoln, he turned back to see the entire road behind him a swirling sea. Realizing his folly, he parked his car on the highest point available and set off cross-country toward town. He said that he expected to find his car in a week, probably demolished and resting in the foot of a ravine.

Reports of first-hand observers differed as to the extent of the flood. One man, a resident of "lower Lincoln" for nearly 40 years, remarked that it was the highest that he had ever seen Salt Creek. "It's way above '42," he said. He was referring to 1942 when, at about the same time of the year, Salt Creek again went on a rampage.

Another observer, a young laborer, was serving as a member of the rescue squad. Using a motor boat, he was trying to reach the furthest homes under water. He admitted it was impossible to get to the stranded families. "The water's just too fast," he

The contest has the backing of one of the oldest clubs on campus—the Ugly club, which was formed almost as soon as the doors of the University were opened and until an unfortunate incident occurred it was one of the leading campus organizations. It was forced to disband, however, when its members set off a keg of dynamite in an instructor's home and blew up the house.
