

Haley, Warren Added To College Days Staff

College Days planning will be done in part by Jerry Warren, and Phyllis Haley, latest students appointed to the general committee.

Warren will be in charge of the opening ceremonies for the three day celebration, which will take place April 26 to 28. Miss Haley will serve as secretary for the celebration.

The program, which will be similar to Iowa State's Veishea and the University of Colorado's CU Days, has received approval from top administrative officials and will be presented to deans of all colleges at a meeting Wednesday in the Chancellor's office at 4 p. m. Representatives from Builders, sponsors of the project, will be there, in addition to several members of the general committee, said Gene Berg, chairman.

Opening Ceremonies

Warren's job as chairman of the opening ceremonies will include introduction of special guests. He will make arrangements for speakers and the opening program.

Commenting on the project which will portray all phases of University life, Warren said it would provide "a spark which should help interest students in all colleges, revive enthusiasm of University alumni and provide incentive for high school students to enroll at the University."

"The opening program," says Warren, will be an introduction to the three day celebration. It will include outstanding speakers and a special feature as the torch carriers at Veishea.

"We intend to give the entire

program a terrific send-off," says Warren, "which will be indicative of the following events."

"College Days," according to Miss Haley, who is secretary of the event, "is the best project that Builders has ever promoted. The whole University can do a lot with it."

Miss Haley, as secretary, will take care of all correspondence and handle files for the celebration.

Tentative Plans

Previous appointments to the committee which is headed by Berg, are: Bill Dugan, assistant chairman; Susie Reed, chairman of open houses; Joan Krueger, publicity chairman; Rob Raun, business manager; Nancy Porter, personnel chairman; Phyllis

Warren

Campbell, special guests and information.

Dean T. J. Thompson will be in charge of the meeting of deans Wednesday. Tentative plans for College Days will be submitted to the group for approval.

A big name dance band and a big name concert artist will be two highlights of the College Days panorama.

In addition College Days planners hope to have a University Theatre play and concerts by various campus music groups.

Open houses, displays, exhibits of all types and contributions from each college, organization and house on campus will be included in the celebration. Orchestral and pre-Orchestra will be asked to present recitals.

Paris Cafe Theme of First Student French Club Meet

Parisian cafe atmosphere-complete with small tables, wine bottle candleholders and French music will open the season for the newly organized University French club.

The cafe, otherwise known as Parlor Y of the Union will be the scene of the club's first meeting, Wednesday, at 7:30 p. m.

Refreshments, in the form of French pastries and cakes, will be served. According to Karl Pond, general chairman of the meeting, everything will be free of charge. The club, which is being revived after one year absence from the University campus, is being sponsored by the entire French department staff.

Tables of Four

Students attending the party will sit in tables of four and will have a chance to get acquainted with each other and with members of the French department staff who will join the students at their tables in an effort to meet all the students.

Included on the evening's agenda will be the singing of traditional French songs. The French instructors will teach the words to the students and the group will gather around the piano for group singing.

"It will not be like the usual group singing," says Pond, "where a leader waves a baton at the students and the students try their best to read the lips of the leader and follow the best they can, without realizing what they are singing or understanding the words."

Chopin Numbers

Robert Firestone, assistant in the German department, will accompany the groups on the piano and will also play selections from Chopin.

Pond, who is a native Frenchman, will preside as master of ceremonies at the party.

According to Pond, the French club meetings this year can be compared with the United Nations meetings. All proceedings which are carried on in French will be translated on a microphone so that all bewildered students can follow what is going on.

"The translation will be steady, and beginners of people not too sharp at their French will not lose out on anything," says Pond.

Slow Speakers

Another plan which will help the beginning French student to understand the program better will be the practice of having the speakers talk more slowly.

On the planning committee for the Wednesday meeting and party are: Romance language faculty members Dr. Charles Coleman, Miss Marion Crain, Miss Dephne Adams, Karl Pond, Forrest Hazard and Bob Gist.

The purpose of the first meeting will be for members to get acquainted with each other and organize.

Plans for the year include parties, meeting with speakers and song sessions. Besides the traditional French tunes, current songs now popular in France will be taught members of the club at a later date.

Students Invited

All University students enrolled in any French course from beginning French to advanced classes are invited to attend. In addition, any students interested in French, though not now taking a course may attend.

"We are planning on a big year," says Pond. "We will try to give good interesting programs at our meetings and are hoping for a good active French club."

New Angle for Cheering . . .

JITTERBUGS?—No, these are cheerleaders Leonard Kehl (bottom) and Jerry Tubbs (top) doing a hand-to-shoulder stand at the Nebraska-Indiana game. The tumbling acts performed were part of a new system of entertainment for the games. All of the eight cheerleaders received instruction in basic tumbling stunts such as trips, flips, hand stands, somersaults, rolls and cartwheels. During the half some of the cheerleaders did hand stands on the goal posts.

Nebraska Weather Conditions Good Topic of Conversation

By Amy Palmer

"The atmospheric condition is one to be deplored." This statement was not uttered by some profound philosopher, but by your reporter. The rumor has it, though, that many other Nebraskans have voiced the same opinion lately in some form or another.

Even our own Coach Glassford was worried about the situation until a reliable remedy was found. Of course, he is having a hard time finding water wings large enough for some of the players.

After some involved research in an encyclopedia (1901 edition) it was discovered that this disgusting water from the skies isn't rain at all. It is (in the words of men who know) an atmospheric phenomena. Study of these various phenomena is known as weather study. Now a weather student (meteorologist) is one who might object to the word choice, surprisingly enough, studies weather. This has about as much effect on the weather as erasing the night before a Chem 31 exam. But, it pays well.

We should all really be grateful for all these awful happenings loyal Nebraskans call weather. After all, where would the great art of conversation be if it weren't for that well known opener?

Can you imagine conversation at an hour dance without it? He would say, "I'm from Grand Island and where are you from?" And she would say, "I'm from Steele City" (or Gopher Junction, as the case may be). A blank look comes to his face and immediately the conversation is at a standstill. But just let two people start off about the weather and right away they're off to a good start. He asks her for a date, they fall in love and marry. Of course the snow ruins their lovely August wedding.

Right now wind and rain cause most trouble. These two conditions lead a great many people to believe that straight hair is a new fad among the girls. It isn't, anyway not intentionally.

The greatest disadvantage in perpetual cloudy weather is that it hides that celestial body known as the moon. Southerners a few years back invented a canned substitute for those bright beams. They called it moonshine. That organization wasn't in business long.

In closing, we have a poem about Nebraska's weather. It was written by a student who was interested in meteorology, but it got the best of her. She has recently been removed to another well known state institution. Her parting words are in this poem:

I walked down the street and the wind blew wild,
The day was warm and sunny,
The dust was thick, but the weather was mild;
The snow was up to my ankles,
I looked in the sky and what did I spy,
But a bird with a parasol!
This is too much I sez, sez I
And a rainbow shone in the sky.

If this poem doesn't strike you as being one of the greatest by a Nebraska author, just blame it on the weather. After all, maybe Shelley and Keats had more favorable weather when they wrote their immortal works.

7 Germans Study At Nebraska

The returns are now in on the year's international student exchange, and Germany leads with some 900 students sent to America. Nebraska's share is seven ranging from sophomore to graduate students.

The feminine members of the Deutschland delegation are Emmy Werner and Gudrun Wiebe, now settled at International House. The men, late arrivals on the campus, are Dieter Berendt and Clemens Hurfan of Bonn University, Hans Austenfeld of Muenster, Tom Iwand of Goettingen, and Hubert Bruns of Munich.

The students agree that Americans don't appreciate what they have. A campus unscarred by war is something new to the Europeans. "If we had a room at Bonn University this size," says Dieter Berendt, indicating the Union lounge, "We'd use it as a lecture room."

Cornhuskers workers who have advertising contracts for the first issue should bring them to the Cornhuskers office in the Union basement by noon today.

Column Writer's Name Omitted

The News and Views column appearing in Monday's edition of The Daily Nebraskan was written by A. T. Anderson, assistant professor of history. His name was unintentionally omitted from the article.

The new column will appear weekly in the "Rag."

Book Reviews California Oath

The fight for academic freedom at the University of California has accumulated enough significance to be of national concern, says the author of a book on the problem.

The "sign-or-get-out" order imposed by the Board of Regents on the faculties at Berkeley and Los Angeles has implications which extend to every campus in the land in the opinion of many educators. The record of the controversy has been kept by the faculty and is set forth in a book entitled "The Year of the Oath," by George Stewart, professor of English at the University of California.

It was in May 1949, that the California Regents first asked all university employees, faculty and staff to sign an anti-Communist oath. In August 1950, 31 members of the faculty who had not yet signed were dismissed from their posts. The time between was one of mounting tension.

At the end of the year of unrelenting pressure the faculty of the University of California was broken says Stewart. A feeling of insecurity prevailed and the recruiting of new teachers was nearly impossible.

Gradually, the book relates university politics became state politics, and step by step the opposing Regents appeared to support the Kremlin.

Stewart says: "If the other workers on this book are sought out and disciplined, or if retaliation is visited upon them in a subtler way, that in itself will be proof that academic freedom no longer exists in the University of California."

Trade Institute Begins New Plan

In response to student requests the American Institute for Foreign Trade has approved a new course for those wishing to specialize in language, area study, or foreign trade.

The new program, Course II, is an extension of the present basic one-year dealing with international relations. The Institute prepares those entering a foreign service, such as: Exchange and banking, exporting and importing, marketing, advertising, accounting, and positions with the United States Government.

Any student who has completed the basic course and has met the requirements for the basic certificate for graduation is eligible for the new course. The additional work does not have to be from the more advanced courses in the student's particular field.

A special certificate indicating the student's major is awarded on completion of the second year course.

Union Craft Shop Open to Students

Union facilities for a craft shop are now open to students. Classes will be held every Tuesday and Wednesday from 7 to 9 p. m.

Classes include leather work, textile painting and weaving. Other craft classes taught are metal work, ginap braiding, figurine painting, wood burning and simple plastics. The only expense for the participant will be the craft material.

The craft shop is sponsored by the Union competitive games and hobbies committee under the direction of Bob Russel. Mrs. Charles Coleman will instruct the classes.
