

New Student Week

At last the University has awakened to the fact that freshman students need more than the usual four lectures to orient them to the University. The lectures which take place in Love Library auditorium have been very insufficient. Don't get me wrong! I'm not advocating more lectures. I think they are a bore, and of little value to anyone, not because the lectures themselves are lacking in content but because a small percentage of the listeners are really interested enough to absorb what is being said.

Lectures don't take the students through the buildings. They point them out on a map which makes little sense to any freshman who has spent only a few days on campus. How much more valuable an actual tour would be. Or even be more sly and schedule meetings in these buildings so the students find out for themselves where the buildings are situated.

A great deal is being done this year, under the able direction of Dr. Arthur A. Hitchcock, to remedy these past wrongs. Advisers will have closer contact with advisees if the program works out as planned. This is certainly a badly needed feature, as many students, who are now going to summer school because of an oversight by an adviser, will tell you. Here's hoping that enough time will be allotted to each student so that an eight semester outline can be made early in his college career.

Another admirable feature connected with the New Student Week is that every student will have the opportunity to visit Ag. campus. Although it is apart from the city campus it is still a part of the University, and each student should be familiar with it. The number of upper-classmen in this institution who have never been on Ag. campus enough to know their ways around is appalling.

Last, but not least, this well-planned New Student Week will be a number one fighter of homesickness which always appears each year. If a student takes advantage of all of the activities which are available to him, he won't have time to be homesick.

Hats off to the originators and planners of this potentially successful orientation program.

Six Weeks Summer Session Ends on Friday the 13th

For many students today, Friday the 13th, marks the end of the University Summer Session. The official announcement came from the office of Dr. Frank E. Sorenson, director of the Summer Session.

The registrar's office does not have an official calculation of the number of students who will leave campus at the end of the short term, but the drop is expected to be substantial.

Although no system of final exams is set up for the summer session, finals will be given during the regular classroom periods. Grades and credits for summer school courses will be mailed to students in the fall.

The University's summer session program is under the direction of a summer session committee headed by Dr. Frank Sorenson, of Teachers college.

The committee is composed of heads of the various departments in which Summer Session courses are offered. In addition to setting up the summer curriculum, this committee is responsible for a variety of clinics.

The eight-weeks session will end Friday, July 27. Finals will be given in the class-room period during the last week of the session.

There will be no Saturday classes since the last day was made up after the 4th of July.

Students Await Hallowed News

Students! Grab that aspirin tablet and prepare the mail box! The long period of wait and worry is about to terminate!

Each morning on arising every red blooded aspirant on promotion to higher class in this hallowed university has dashed excitedly to the front door to seek his grades. Finally the h-hour is at hand. Second semester grades will be mailed sometime toward the middle of July!

Suggested ideas for easing the pain are the already mentioned aspirin, cushioning around the mail box to avoid painful falling, and doctor standing by in case of extreme emergency.

Lincoln Students Get Fellowships

Three University students, all from Lincoln, have been awarded post-graduate research fellowships at the College of Agriculture for the next school year.

The awards, all established with the University of Nebraska Foundation, and recipients are:

The Nathan J. Gold Research Fellowship of $1,000 has been awarded to Everett J. Dennis who graduated from the College of Agriculture in June and is seeking a Masters degree in Agronomy. He is married and a veteran of World War II. His research work will be concerned with effect of lime and phosphorus on the quality and yield of alfalfa in different types of Nebraska soils.

The Charles Stuart Memorial Fellowship of $500 has been awarded to George W. Reichenbach who graduated from the College of Agriculture in June. He is married. He will study the effect of nitrogen fertilizers as a spray on the yield and quality of bromegrass and corn.

The A. W. Sampson Fellowship in Pasture Management of $300 has been awarded to Ernest B. Jackson. Mr. Jackson graduated in 1946 from Brigham Young University at Provo, Utah. He is seeking a masters degree in agronomy at Nebraska. He will study problems in management of grass as pasture. He is married and has two children.

Week's News in Review

Three allied negotiators began cease-fire talks, Saturday, in Kaesong. The negotiators were accompanied by three interpreters and the pilots of the helicopters which took them to the scene of the talks.

Gen. Matthew Ridgway announced that a five-man United Nations delegation headed by Vice Admiral C. Turner Joy will conduct formal cease-fire negotiations with the Communists, July 10.

Other Negotiators

Other negotiators who were named are Maj. Gen. L. C. Craigie, U.S. air force, Maj. Gen. Henry L. Hodes, U.S. Eight army, Rear Admiral Arleigh Burke, U.S. navy, and Maj. Gen. Paik Sun Yup, Republic of Korea army.

Developments affecting the United States followed the sentencing of Archbishop Jozsef Groesz and others in Hungary this week. The United States agreed to stop its cultural work at the request of the Hungarian government. Then, Albert Scherer, Jr., and Ruth Tryon, American diplomats, were ordered to leave within 24 hours.

Oatis Sentenced

An Associated Press Correspondent in Czechoslovakia, William N. Oatis was sentenced to ten years in prison on pleading guilty to spying. He was immediately granted five years for good behavior.

President Truman labeled the conviction as a Communist attempt to intimidate the free world press. The State Department issued a statement that the Oatis trial "was in fact a kangaroo court staged before the klieg lights of propaganda."

More Floods

On the regional front, floods were in the headlines. In the St. Charles, Mo., area damage reached two million dollars. A break in the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad embankment in the area led to the flooding of 15 thousand acres.

War Heroes

In Washington, four Korean war heroes were awarded the Medal of Honor. Receiving medals from the President were Einar H. Ingaman, Tomahawk, Wis.; Stanley T. Adams, Olathe, Kans.; Raymond Harvey, Pasadena, Cal., and Lewis L. Millett, South Dartmouth, Mass.
