Swindler Statement Published

Publication Cites Education Ideas

Dr. William F. Swindler, Director of the School of Journalism, was cited in the Dec. 6 issue of Editor and Publisher magazine for his "particularly good statement" regarding the necessity of a liberal education for journalism students.

In the statement Swindler said: "The purpose of professional education for journalism . . . is to discover and train persons who will some day be superior journalists and qualitatively will improve the media for which they are working. . . .

"Our fundamental concern . . . is that the professional journalist shall have an exceptionally broad education and that in the process of seeking a broad education he does not simply spread himself thin."

It is a primary responsibility of the school of journalism, Dr. Swindler said, to integrate and implement the background education.

He emphasized the importance of the journalism reading room as a kind of public affairs research laboratory. The senior seminar in Investigative Methods in Editing, Swindler pointed out, utilizes other courses as a background.

"Journalism training," says Dr. Swindler, "is essentially a continual process of ranging from theoretical to practical and back again. . . . Its primary aim is to provide educated personnel who will be equipped to do a better job of informing the public in a democracy."

"The school envisions its functions as that of liaison—between the courses the student elects to take and those he elects not to take; between the college in which he is enrolled and the other colleges with which he would not normally come in contact; between the news of the day, and the background of the news."

Kelly Advises Breeders On Cattle Feeding

Pasturing cows in fields void of weeds or other dry matter is largely responsible for bloat, Dr. Philip L. Kelly told the Nebraska Guernsey Breeders Association at their annual meeting Wednesday.

Kelly, chairman of the dairy department at the University, told the guernsey breeders that a recent study in California indicated that the bloat'ng results from forcing the cattle to eat lush alfalfa or ladino. Alfalfa shorter than six inches will not cause bloating, Dr. Kelly reported.

Dr. Kelly said that the scientists found that feeding of palatable sudan or oat hay was the best way to prevent bloat.

Also on the program was Robert Stewart, assistant secretary of the American Guernsey Breeders Association. Stewart told the association that the outlook for dairying was the brightest in history for Nebraska and the nation.

He cited increased consumption of fluid milk and increase in the consumption per person as the major reasons for the bright outlook.

He said 1952 was the biggest year for the Guernsey breed in the number of animals recorded by the association—a 17 per cent increase since 1951.

These two guys were sitting on the side of a hill whittling and passing the time of day when suddenly a train came up, went into a tunnel, ran through it and came out on the other side.
