

'Tackling Good, But Technique, Aim Need Improving'—Innocents

"The usual place" was the scene of an Innocent's tackling practice Monday afternoon.

The workout was supervised by Honorary Innocent Bill Glassford, who is the Society's Ivy Day coach. The squad is practicing technique and aim for the Saturday Ivy event. Following the Ivy performance, spring practices will terminate.

The members have agreed, as evidenced by Monday's drill, that their tackling skill was good for the first time out this season but that much improvement is needed. The problems presented by the necessity of tackling in a confined space and hitting the target without injuring bystanders are slowly being worked out.

Since Monday, the Innocents have had three practices and will polish their drills off with Friday afternoon's final.

Glenn Rosenquist, Innocent's publicity chairman, said that it was necessary to learn the proper method of tackling a man without hurting him or the tackler.

"Eager junior's eyes often follow the Innocents around," Rosenquist said, "and you have to hit them from behind when they are not looking. Glassford's advice is to hit them low."

It's been said that in the Innocent constitution there is a sin for an Innocent to crack a smile on Ivy day, because they are stalking their men.

There is also a last minute change into tackling robes before an Innocent tackles his man.

Mental Health Committee Urges Better Facilities, Education

A definition of mental health and an explanation of who can help those who have not been able to attain or maintain it have been included in a bulletin released by the Mental Health Week Committee in connection with Mental Health Week.

Mental Health, according to the committee's statement, is a way of life developed in the very process of living. All community organizations and institutions contribute to the development of this life.

"To the extent that any organization contribute to one's likelihood of attaining self-respect and confidence, developing skill in one's relationships with others and achieving the utilization of abilities and capacities, that organization may be viewed as contributing significantly to mental health," the committee states.

Dr. Samuel I. Fuenning, Director of the University Student Health Center, said the committee is composed primarily of members of the city Mental Health Society. They are interested individuals, Dr. Fuenning said, who are interested mainly in the development of facilities and the promotion of education in the mental health field.

He amplified the committee's definition of mental health by saying that, according to the National Association for Mental Health, the individual is well adjusted who is able to meet the demands of life, adjust himself to new situations, relate himself to other people and get satisfaction from what he is doing. Pointing out that mental health is everyone's problem, Dr. Fuenning said that everyone has emotional disturbances and problems they could use help with.

"It has been determined at other Universities with more complete mental health facilities that all the way from 10 to 15 per cent of the student body could use advantageous mental health clinics," Dr. Fuenning stated.

The University mental health program has a clinical phase, where those with mental and emotional problems can get advice, counseling, or an insight into their problems. Other phases of the University program are education and research.

Dr. Fuenning said, that he hopes they can soon have an introductory course in mental health from a medical viewpoint. This is important, he said, because of the over-all program of prevention.

"The main objective of the entire University health program here is prevention," the doctor said. "We are interested in what can be done to prevent mental illness."

In regard to educating in the field of mental health, Dr. Fuenning said that the work of psychiatrists and mental health workers is not commonly known. He said that there are many misconceptions in the University about the differences between psychiatrists, clinical psychiatrists and psychologists. A psychiatrist is a medical man who has specialized in the field of mental health, just as in surgery or obstetrics. There are many branches in the field of psychology, but one of the most important recent developments is the clinical psychologist.

The clinical psychologist is a member of a mental health team who works with a psychiatrist and a clinical social worker. He does testing and works in psychotherapy.

A psychiatric clinical social worker does work directed toward the environmental situation of the patient. She is also trained as a social worker and mentally ill. Often clinical social worker can aid in psychotherapy.

The biggest trouble in working with these people, according to Dr. Fuenning, is that "they all like to be independent—that's just human nature."

MB's Plan To Work Or Wed

The 16 graduating members of Black Masque Chapter of Mortar Board will be scattered throughout the United States and the world within a few months following commencement exercises.

For at least five Mortar Boards, immediate post-graduation plans include a wedding professional.

President Sylvia Krasne will be married June 14 in Omaha to Alan Katske. After spending the summer in Virginia, she and her husband will return to Lincoln in the fall.

Vice President Virginia Koehler's wedding ceremony will be June 29 in Geneva. She will be married to Robert Knoll, assistant professor of English. They will spend the remainder of the summer in San Francisco and return to Lincoln in the fall.

Cecelia Pinkerton, Mortar Board secretary, will be married to Dean Linscott, June 27 in Beatrice. They will be living where the army sends him.

Jeanne Vierk will be married to Clayton Yetter June 13 and Elizabeth Gass will walk down the aisle June 24 with Gene VonFange, a University alumni. They will live in Schenectady, N.Y. Plans vary for the non-marriage planning Mortar Board members. The majority intend to teach.

Nanci DeBord, however, will be employed by KOLN and living in Lincoln.

Joan Krueger, who plans to continue working at the Lincoln Star during the summer, will leave in the fall for Europe for graduate work.

Adele Coryell plans to work in The Star society department during the summer. The remaining coeds will be teaching.

Gitche Carey, after loafing during the summer, will be a speech correctionist as will Joan Hanson. Neither have signed contracts yet.

Hester Morrison will be teaching in Hebron next fall. During the summer she plans to travel and remain in Beatrice.

Mary Ann Kellogg plans to work at a resort during the summer and teach in the fall.

Jean Holmes will be working on housing research for the University during the summer and teaching home economics in Central City in the fall.

Doris Carlson has signed a contract to teach in Omaha. She will remain at home during the summer.

Jean Loudon tentatively plans to teach next fall, and Artie Westcott, who will be in Holdrege during the summer, will teach home economics at Columbus next year.

Texas University To Award 5 Fellowships For Grad Study

University of Texas has announced five fellowships and four research assistantships for graduate study in public administration.

Nebaska students, being non-Texas residents, are among those who are eligible to apply for the non-resident graduate student scholarship. This scholarship pays the amount of the tuition fee above the regular $25 per semester charged to Texas residents.

If accepted, applicants must enroll in the program of studies leading to the degree of Master of Arts in Public Administration.

It is expected that no one will apply unless he is free to accept the appointment, that he will not accept any other appointment except by special permission, and that he will not surrender the fellowship for the period for which it was awarded, except for reasonable causes.

A number of graduate assistants are also employed by the institute of public affairs. Here the student is given the opportunity to get research experience under the direction of a member of the institute's professional staff.

These assistantships are open to any student enrolled in the public administration course, although they are not restricted to such students.

The stipend for the fellowships has been set at $750 each. However, the stipend for the assistantships will vary according to the needs of the institute, the qualifications of the individual, and the student's course load. In general, the amount will range from $600 and $1,200.

Applications should be returned to the Director, Institute of Public Administration, University of Texas, Austin, Texas, by August 1.

Unions Slate Awards Picnic For Tuesday

The Annual Awards Picnic for the City and Ag Unions will be Tuesday from 5:30 to 7 p.m. behind the Activities Building at Ag College.

Following the picnic supper, awards will be made to Union Activities workers and Board members for outstanding service. Jack Greer will be master of ceremonies.

Trophies will be given to the outstanding committee worker in City Union activities and the one in Ag Union activities. Outstanding Board members will receive the Distinguished Service Award.

Keys will be awarded to Board members for one year's service, and certificates will be given to committee workers with the highest number of hours.

Cars for the picnic will be leaving the Union between 5 and 6:30 p.m.
