Red Cross Honors 25 At Banquet

Twenty-five University students were honored Thursday evening at the annual Red Cross Honors Banquet.

Award winners and their committees are: Mona Smith, grey ladies; Margaret Hallam, Willa Placek, Ann Luchsinger, handicraft; Sandra Curran and Pattie Ellis, handicapped children; Carolyn Schacht and Jane Steven, orthopedic; Patricia Stafford, Nancy Cherny, Janice Hussey, Mary Knorr, orphanages.

Sam Ellis and Sam Van Pelt, penitentiary; Doris Anderson, brownies; Carolyn Galley and Maryclare Dodson, girl scouts; Phyllis Phillipsen, Leigh Cartwright and Dick Porcas, veteran's hospital; Blaine Ward and Ann Kokjer, water safety; Mary Ann McMullen and Shirley McPeck, urban league, and Barbara Clark, publicity.

GENE BERG, founder and first president of the Red Cross College Unit, was the main speaker. Berg spoke on "The Story of Red Cross." Mary Stromer, president served as master of ceremonies; Fran Locke, vice president, was in charge of the banquet. Special guests were members of the Lancaster County Red Cross Board, the Rev. Rex Knowles, Presbyterian-Congregational pastor, and Joyce Johnson, retiring president.

SERENADES, small musical groups and skits were as popular and as universal as Christmas carols in December. "Female" Sigma Chi's searched for their candidate in all the houses he would logically be hiding in.

A safari straight from the jungles of the Theta Xi house paraded their guide through the female section of the campus. Complete with African carriers, load-bearers and riflemen, the safari seemed to disappear as quickly as it appeared.

THE "GUADALAJARA" trio sang such serious, unemotional songs to their northern fraternity brothers, the Beta Theta Pi's, that they were presented to help get out the women's vote. The three Mexicans, however, often used their serapes and sombreros to cover their broad grins and to stifle their laughter.

Sigma Nu "limousine," adapted from a truck used to carry heavy construction equipment, transported voters to the polls. Evidently, the preceding days of campaigning had so tired the coeds that they needed this luxury.

Two teams of underclass debaters will compete in the Delta Sigma Rho, national speech honorary, tournament at the University of Wisconsin at Madison, Friday and Saturday.
