

All Husker Cards On Table For Oklahoma Showdown

By WALT BLORE
Staff Sports Writer

Oklahoma storms into town on the tail of Bill Glassford's startling announcement to attempt to regain the Big Seven crown for the eighth consecutive year.

Bud Wilkinson's Sooners bring a 26-game win skin with them, but that isn't all. Their ranks are bolstered with All-American candidates. They have a great attitude that accounts for some of their success.

Some of the men that represent the nation's No. 1 team are: Jimmy Harris, Tommy McDonald, Bob Burris, Bo Bolinger, and Jerry Tubbs.

Harris is a junior quarterback who has been called the most dangerous running signal caller in the country. This accounts for Oklahoma's numerous plays from the option series.

McDonald, the leading Sooner candidate for All-American honors, is also a junior and the leading ground gainer on the squad. The Albuquerque N.M. halfback has averaged 7.2 yards per carry so far this season.

Burris comes from a long line of Sooner football thorough-breds and is one of the most powerful halfbacks in the conference. He has a 4.4 average on the ground.

Bolinger was an All-Big Seven guard selection last year as a junior. This year he is shooting for All-American honors.

Tubbs is a transplanted fullback that is reputed to be even more devastating as a linebacker. Jerry stands 6'2" and weighs in at 206. He's also an exceptionally fast man for his size.

Nebraska is going into the game with all but two men ready for action. This is the smallest sick list the Big Red has had since the first of the season. Soph Marlin Hilding is the only man definitely out for the season's finale. Syl Harris, senior scatback, is a doubtful starter.

Brightest news in the Cornhusker camp this week was the announcement that Guard Jim Murphy was ready for action. Murphy suffered a broken fibula bone in his leg in a scrimmage session before the K-State encounter and has taken a little longer to heal than was originally expected. He was one of Nebraska's leading contenders for all-conference and All-American honors.

Ten seniors have been named as captains for their final game of their respective careers as college gridiron performers. They are Dean Lux, Dick Moore, Jack Bralley, Don Hewitt, Doran Post, Sylvester Harris, John Edwards, Jon McWilliams, Rex Fischer, and Bill Taylor. Taylor has been named acting captain, but all 10 will call the toss of the coin.

This will be the final game under the Cornhusker Scarlet and Cream for Bill Glassford. Glassford announced his resignation to his team in a meeting with the squad before Thursday's practice session. The Big Red has an excellent psychological advantage as a result of this announcement. This, however, is all that it is good for.

Nebraska has a 16-15-3 record against the mighty Sooner. The men from the land of red dust and black oil have won the last 12 from the Huskers, however. This game will give the Oil Barons the first chance in the series' history to pull even.

Fischer, Greenlaw Lead NU Offense

Willie Greenlaw and Rex Fischer are leading the Husker offense with 5.0 averages. Fischer has netted 592 yards while Willie is an even 100 behind him. Quarterback Don Erway continues to lead scoring with 55 markers.

Scouting reports and the exchange movie indicate that Oklahoma makes more use of the option play than the other Split-T teams the Cornhuskers have faced.

This is undoubtedly due to the fact that the Sooners have two of the finest running quarterbacks in the game, Jimmy Harris and Jay O'Neil.

Both Harris and O'Neil are great runners and very dangerous on the option," Glassford said. "They rank with such Sooner stars as Darrell Royal, Jack Mitchell, Gene Calame, and others."

As expected Nebraska has been tabbed a 21-point underdog by the oddsmakers. After an early spread of 22 to 26, the odds dropped to 21 as the cold air hit.

The game will be carried as a part of the CBS Roundup of football Saturday. Joe Foss will be the announcer.

The refusal of Bill Glassford to renew the option of his contract as head football coach may have come as a shock to some followers of Nebraska athletics, but to most it was a completion of the inevitable.

The saga of Bill Glassford is a thankless one. Glassford was selected to pilot the Huskers in '49 after his predecessors had chalked up a feeble 18 wins and 45 losses on the ledger since the Rose Bowl squad of '40. While at his position here Glassford has compiled four winning seasons and three losing ones. Outstanding were the "Reynold's machine" of '50 and last year's Orange Bowl squad.

So, although his record may not be comparable to that of Bud Wilkinson, Glassford accomplished his purpose . . . he pulled the Huskers out of the depths of the loop's cellar and this year faced perhaps one of the hardest schedules a Cornhusker squad ever faced. Perhaps the win-loss record may not be outstanding but let's don't forget we're now competing with national powers again (top ranked Oklahoma, number one big 10 team Ohio State, and nationally rated Texas A&M and Pitt.)

It seems the "free" press delights itself by the petty actions which seem to hire and fire coaches and thus remedy situations. It is also to be considered there are eleven players who attempt to perform to the best of their ability and to date, I can't think of a worse morale builder than tearing down the conditions which surround them. It seems no one has ever thought that if criticism is to be aired, it could be of a constructive nature. And most of all, static could be handled in the off season.

Glassford himself has an adage that sums up the malignant situation very adequately: "The intelligent have their thoughts in their hearts; the stupid their thoughts in their mouths."

Phi Psis Nip Dents

Phi Kappa Psi was crowned new All-University football champions as they downed the Dents in an overtime period in intramural play. As the regular game ended in a 0-0 deadlock the overtime period was necessary to determine the new champion.

Duane Rankin, Phi Psi tailback led the winners by finding targets in Ron Frei, Jerry Anderson, and Gene Welch with his pinpointed aeriels. Rankin had no trouble getting his bullets away with stout Larry Gay and Bob Pham providing protection.

Phil Ewen was the big gun for the Dent attack. Bill Shamboltz, Squeek Allen and Doc Hofcort were his favorite receivers in the Dent air barrage.

Glassford Steps Down

By GEORGE MOYER

Bill Glassford resigned today as head football coach at the University to mark the end of an era in University athletics. Glassford's resignation climaxes a series of changes in the coaching personnel of the University which began with

Team's Comment

"We, on the squad sincerely feel Nebraska is losing a great coach and a good friend" stated a release handed out by University football team.

Captain Bill Taylor personally said, "I feel the future of Nebraska football will bear this out."

the resignation of George "Potsy" Clark as athletic director in 1953. J. William Glassford was hired to coach football at the University in 1949 after his 1948 New Hampshire University team had gone undefeated. He replaced "Potsy" Clark who was made athletic director, and in his first season brought Nebraska from two wins and seven losses to four wins and five losses.

In 1950 Glassford produced the best Nebraska team of the postwar period. It won six, lost two and tied one. Bob Reynolds was the leading scorer in the nation and was named to nearly every All-American team in the country. It was after this season that Glassford signed his unique 5 and 5 contract. This contract called for him to coach Nebraska for 5 years at a base pay of $11,000 a year. At the end of the 5 years, Glassford, not the University, was to have the option of renewing the contract.

The following year, 1951, Nebraska had its worst season. The Huskers, hampered by injury and inexperience, won only from Iowa State. Later Kansas State, which had defeated Nebraska 7-6, forfeited to the Huskers for using an ineligible player. Criticism of Glassford began then and continued through the next year although Nebraska rallied to a 5-4-1 season.

In 1953 the team won 3, lost 6 and tied 1. Following this season came the infamous players' revolt. The revolt ended when the Board of Intercollegiate Athletics unanimously supported Glassford. The board was disbanded by the Regents and control of Athletics at the University was vested in the athletic director.

Last year the Huskers took second in the Big Seven and went to the Orange Bowl. It looked like Glassford would escape criticism until the Big Red dropped a 34-7 decision to Duke.

The final chapter of Bill Glassford's story at Nebraska will be written this Saturday when a Nebraska team, which Glassford claims is his best at the University, takes on the nation's number one team, Oklahoma.
