Outside World:

Campaign Aid Proposed

BY ARLENE HRBEK
Nebraskan Staff Writer

Sen. Neuberger (D-Ore) proposed legislation Monday providing for federal financing of national election campaigns. He said the purpose was to "strike loose the financial fetters from our democratic process of government."

In a news conference Neuberger said the need for the legislation "has been brought home to the nation in recent weeks because of the controversy" over a $2500 campaign contribution brought up during the debate on the natural gas bill.

Under the proposed bill equal contributions would be made to each major political party from the federal Treasury for campaigns for president and for Senate and House seats. Neuberger said that under this formula each major party would receive approximately 11 million dollars for the 1956 campaigns.

Snow Causes Misery

Dwindling food stocks brought fresh misery and the spectre of famine to ice-enshrined Europe Monday. Vegetable prices rocketed as spring crops rotted under a three-week pall of snow.

President Eisenhower awaits an answer from Europe to his offer of American surplus foods to aid the stricken.

Expressing growing concern over the hardships being experienced in Europe, Eisenhower said: "I know that the people of the United States will deem it a real privilege to put these agricultural commodities to the great service of relieving the suffering of our Western European neighbors."

The known death toll rose to 676 in the worst winter in recent times. France had the largest number of fatalities, 159.

Nebraska Primary

Sen. Knowland (R-Calif) is considering entering the Nebraska presidential primary if President Eisenhower doesn't run for another term, a source close to Knowland said.

Asked what Knowland's reaction would be if Nebraska supporters undertook to enter his name, the source said he assumed the senator would do nothing. Knowland was not available for comment.

President Eisenhower and Knowland were entered as opposing candidates for the Republican presidential preference vote in the Pennsylvania primary election on April 24.

30-Hour Work Week

Results of the latest Gallup poll show that a majority of the American people believe that the day will come when industries will have a 30-hour work week.

This plan has often been advanced by union leaders as a means of opening up more jobs.

The professional and business people, those who could have the most to say about a shorter work week, are the most inclined to believe that there will be a 30-hour week eventually. Their average guess is 10 years.

Labor Force Reduced:

Kaplan Discusses Mobility Of Labor

Dr. A. D. H. Kaplan, speaking in the Social Science Auditorium Monday, raised the question that the guaranteed annual wage plan may reduce considerably the mobility of the U. S. labor force in the future.

Dr. Kaplan, senior staff economist at Brookings Institution in Washington, D. C., said the present plan is actually a supplement payment to unemployment compensation.

He said since the payment is tax free and in many cases approximates three-quarters of the employee wage, the employee may lose his initiative to look for another job when unemployed.

"In the past, the American labor force has been the most adaptable in the world and this has been one of the reasons for our high productivity."

Other problems which arise under the plan, he said:

1. The employer becomes responsible for providing wages for the employee even though he is not producing a product with which to meet this cost.

2. The employer is saddled with the obligation of keeping workers he may not need and may be prevented from branching into new products or using different methods of production.

3. Since the plan is operated on seniority basis, "there may be difficulty for newcomer-workers to find employment in certain industries or move up the ladder rapidly."

However, Dr. Kaplan suggested that remedies for these problems may involve allowing the employees who have obtained these rights of guaranteed wages to take these rights to another job. This, he said, would not dampen the initiative of a worker to find another job when unemployed.

Secondly, he said, more studies should be made on "how close to the worker's full salary he can be guaranteed but still not affect his initiative to seek other work."

Dr. Kaplan's two-day visit to the University is being sponsored by the Department of Economics of the College of Business Administration.

He also delivers a public address Monday at 8 p.m. in the Love Library auditorium on "The Impact of Big Business on the Economic Outlook."

Favor Objective Test:

Ag Campus Poll Shows Student View On Exams

A poll of 270 Ag College students revealed that college men and women have some very definite views on the subject of exams.

Students in classes of dairy husbandry, vocational education and chemistry were involved in the survey.

Results of the poll indicate that the majority of students prefer a challenging quiz with grades scaled over an easy quiz scored on an absolute grade basis.

Two thirds of the students said they preferred objective type tests over essay type tests. The largest number of students thought that exams should be given weekly in a course and that the instructor should review important points before a test. They were also in favor of discussing the test after it was given.

Two hundred and five students answered, "Yes," to the question,

"Is cheating on exams a problem on the Ag Campus?" Only sixty-one answered, "No."

The survey was taken by Dr. R. L. Borchers, Mrs. Rhea Keeler, and Dr. L. K. Crowe, in preparation for a panel discussion at an Ag College faculty forum on examinations and reports.
