

Richard Niebuhr:

Generations Should Not Be Judged By Another

By SARA JONES
News Editor

"I'm always dubious of the efforts of one generation to judge another," Dr. Richard Niebuhr, visiting lecturer for the Montgomery lecture series, said in a special interview with the Daily Nebraskan Thursday.

Dr. Niebuhr was referring to the statement of Karl Shapiro, University professor, to the effect that the present generation of college students are "intellectually spathic".

"Perhaps the present generation is a little dubious of their ability to change the existing social order," he said. "Perhaps they are too anxious for dogmatic answers. But every time I make such a statement I find exceptions. Every generation is pretty much like any other. Only the spokesmen change."

Asked to further explain what was meant by the statement "Whatever is, is good," which is a key phrase in his lecture series, Dr. Niebuhr explained "It is a matter of relation to each other, a question of multiplicity of relations."

"When I say, what ever is, is good, I mean that what is there in relation to the center of things," he said. "Therefore it is good." "For instance," he said, "in a man-centered scheme, bacteria may not seem good. In a fish-centered scheme, they are. Thus, when I say it is good, I do not necessarily mean that it is good to me, but that because it exists, it must be good, in relation to the center of being."

Dr. Niebuhr explained that the series of lectures which he is delivering will comprise the basis for a new book which will be published by Harpers next fall.

The book will probably retain the same name "Essays on Radical Monotheism," he said.

The second of his series of lectures was delivered Wednesday night at Love Library auditorium. The final lecture will be Friday at 8 p.m.

Tests For Premeds Required To Enter

Premedical students who are applying for 1958 admittance to any accredited medical college must take the medical college admittance test, according to Eugene Powell, premedical advisor.

"Tests are being given at the University, May 11 and applications to take it must be made to the Educational Testing Service, Princeton, N.J., by April 27," Powell stated.

Application forms are available at 306 Bessy Hall.

Coed Counselors

Sharon Holt, Marilyn Thurman, Marsha Boden and Sue Rhoades confer over a coke in the Round Up Room of the Union. These big and little sisters, sponsored by Coed Counselors, meet regularly to discuss problems encountered by all freshman at the University, according to Marjane Craig, chairman of the big sister program. Girls who are interested in signing up for next se-esters program may do so in the Coed Counselor room in Rosa Boutin Hall or in the Ag Union, Miss Craig said. Applications must be in by Saturday noon, she stated.

Adams, House: Two New Appointees Announced

Two new department heads—in poultry husbandry and commercial arts — were appointed Tuesday afternoon by the University Board of Regents.

Dr. John Adams, associate professor of poultry husbandry at the University of Wisconsin, will succeed Prof. Frank Mussehl, who will retire July 1 as chairman and professor of poultry husbandry after 40 years service.

Dr. F. Wayne House, associate professor of department of commercial arts, will succeed Luvicy Hill, who has served as chairman since 1922. Miss Hill will remain as associate professor.

Dr. Adams, whose appointment is effective July 1, has been on the Wisconsin staff since 1949. A native of Oklahoma, he obtained his bachelor degree in 1939 from Oklahoma A & M. College; and his master and Doctor of Philosophy degrees, both from University of Wisconsin.

He is the author of a dozen professional publications on poultry husbandry.

A member of the staff since 1952, Dr. House taught a year at Northern Illinois State Teachers College before coming to Nebraska. He earlier taught at Ohio State University, Franklin University and Columbus, Ohio, High School.

Dr. House earned his Doctor of Philosophy degree from Ohio State University in 1951.

His appointment as new chairman and professor of commercial arts is effective Sept. 1.
