Professor Publishes New Book

Dr. John Peter Anton, assistant professor of philosophy at the University, has published a book on philosophy. The book, "Aristotle's Theory of Contrariety," is called the first comprehensive interpretation of the principles of opposites.

The book deals with the problem that permeates the entire development of ancient Greek philosophy. The volume was published this past month as part of the noted International Library of Psychology, Philosophy and Scientific Method, headquartered in England.

The volume is the result of several years of research in ancient philosophy. He acquired part of his classical background in Greece, where he obtained a degree from the Academy of Education and a certificate from the University of Athens.

The bulk of his work is centered around the philosophy of Aristotle because he believes that the principle of contrariety received from him its "most clear and classical formulation."

In his book, Dr. Anton discusses the vital role of the principle of contrariety in the diverse aspects of Aristotle's thought, logical, cosmological, categorical, metaphysical, psychological and moral.

The 37-year-old Ohioan joined the University of Nebraska staff in 1955. He has twice been the recipient of the Wurlitzer Foundation Fellowship and last year received a grant from the University of Nebraska Research Council to complete the book.

He studied philosophy at Columbia University, where he received his Bachelor's, Master's, and Doctor of Philosophy degrees. His earlier works include a book in Greek, entitled "The Essence of Religious Poetry," and various articles in professional journals.

Dr. Brozek, a native of Bohemia, is the editor of two publications: "Body Measurements and Human Nutrition" and "Nutrition and Behavior."

A panel discussion on "Our Turkish Neighbors" will be given by Dr. Marvel Baker, Dr. Thomas Gooding and Mrs. Albin Anderson.

All three were members of the University group in Turkey until this fall when they returned to the Ag College.

Nebraska Escaping Flu Woes

Nebraska has been fortunate up to now as far as a flu epidemic is concerned.

A Lincoln medical supply company said it is now receiving larger shipments of Asian flu vaccine, and the flu has been kept in check here by the use of some 11,500 doses of the vaccine.

People throughout the state have received almost unlimited inoculation from their family doctor or their local hospital, it has been reported.

Other sections of the country have not been as fortunate. Flu is regarded as having reached epidemic proportions in five states—New York, Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi and Utah, medical authorities say.

A Public-Health Service spokesman said the disease probably has reached epidemic proportions in Alabama, Illinois, Michigan and Oregon and possibly has done so in California.

He explained that a decision on whether a disease has reached epidemic proportions in a state or other area is one of judgment on the part of state health authorities, who determine whether the disease occurrence in their opinion warrants designation as an epidemic area.

Two areas of the country hardest hit are the Rocky Mountain and Southern Oklahoma areas.

The epidemic has caused thousands of school absences and postponement of cancellation of many football games.

SAVE FIVE ON THE LINE

Now that school is in full swing (understatement), no one seems to have much more than 5 minutes to call their own. But 5 minutes is 5 minutes, and if you feel that 5 minutes of your time is time to be saved, may I make a suggestion on a way to save that 5.
