Newspapers Celebrate

To commemorate the newspapers of America, National Newspaper Week is being celebrated in the U. S. this week.

Many newspapers are taking advantage of the week by introducing their readers to the various services provided by newspapers.

"Newspapers contain the information that permits an informed citizenry," Dr. William Hall, director of the school of journalism, said. "Without an informed public, a democracy cannot function."

Editorials and articles concerning Newspaper Week and other pertinent topics are being cited this week in University journalism classes.

Freedom

"Freedom is a shared right between newspapers and readers," Dr. Hall continued, "a right to publish and a public's right to know. The former is based on the latter."

"The American press was even an active participant in the Revolutionary War. It served to unite the colonists against Great Britain. For this reason, it has been said that printers' ink runs through America's veins."

Arthur Strang, secretary-manager of the Illinois Press Assn., is chairman of this 19th annual National Newspaper Week.

Sponsoring the week is the Newspaper Assn. Managers, Inc., of which Vern Scofield is president. Scofield is also manager of the Nebraska Press Assn.

Role

In expressing a newspaper's role in society, Frank Tripp, executive editor of the Gannett newspaper chain said:

"When any medium, other than the newspaper, delivers all of the world and neighborhood news in detail; ballyhoos local charities and civic endeavors to successful conclusions; borrows the babes, graduates them, marries them and buries them; stands as watchdog of home, safety and liberty; fights for the rights of the people, unlicensed by fickle government, controlled only by justice and decency—"

"When one becomes a permanent record of current events, the date book of the community, the housewife's shopping guide; recovers neighbors' dogs, sells their attics empty, finds them a used refrigerator, tells them who's sick, dead, engaged or married! who's painted his barn or mended his fences—"

"When another than the newspaper does these few little chores daily, in a preservable package, at a pittance a copy, then I'll believe that some folks might not find time to read their hometown papers."

Library Losses Frequent

Love Popular Place to Leave Coats, Books

Many University students are walking around coatless, hungry and nearsighted if articles left in Love Library are any indication.

Eyeglasses, coats and jackets are cited as items most often left unclaimed at the library.

"Of course we are the recipients of many umbrellas, too," Richard Farley, associate director of University libraries added. "And this summer we sent about 10 raincoats to the University's lost and found."

Approximately 20 or 30 items are left a day, he said. The library keeps them until the stack grows cumbersome, and then takes it to the Lost and Found.

No Value

People usually claim money, rings and watches, Farley commented, "but evidently neither text books nor clothing are considered to be valuable because they're left all the time."

A complete cosmetic outfit was left in the ladies restroom last week, including powder, eyebrow pencil and astringent. Four sets of car keys have been found, as well as several bank checkbooks, jewelry, stationery and numerous old lunches.

Last year, Farley said, a handwritten master's dissertation on philosophy was found. The name was on one of the pages, and the library contacted the owner.

Horror

"He didn't even know that he had lost it," Farley laughed, "just hugged it and said 'this wasn't lost, was it' in horrified tones."

Another woman hung one of her good dresses in the library and was very upset when it was not there when she returned several days later.
