

Displays of India

USHA KHURANA of Central India and Mrs. Rex Knowles discuss a gold and black purse at an Indian Foreign Student function held Saturday night. The purse was one of a number of handmade items from India on display. The celebration is believed to be the first of its kind held in Lincoln.

Indian Students Hold Premier NU Function

Holiday Celebration, Crafts Display, Spark Event

The celebration of two Indian holidays, a folk-dance, Indian food, a chance to just talk, and a display of handicraft from India. These were the highlights of the first function to be held by the Indian foreign students on this campus.

The event was held Saturday night. About 80 persons attended the celebration, only about 20 of whom were from India. Among the guests were other foreign students, a justice of the State Supreme Court, University students and instructors and former missionaries to India.

The function was in celebration of Divali and Dasare, which are celebrated about 18 days apart at about this time of the year in India. Mr. Rao explained the holidays to the guests. Desera lasts about four days and Divali 10 or 15. Mr. Rao said that Divali is symbolic of four aspects of God: generous nature, bountiful goodness, benevolence and protection and that Dasare is a worship of God the powerful and God the just.

Many of the celebrations of Indian holidays are similar to ours. There are fireworks, new clothes, and visiting relatives. One beautiful symbol was a dish of lighted and floating red candles.

Although the holidays were a reason for holding the gathering, there was a second reason behind the reason according to N. K. Dutta, who first thought of holding the function.

Mr. Dutta said that when he came to the University last June, he met a few students from India, but not many. He planned how he might get them all together. When more students came from India this fall, they held a meeting to plan the event. They felt that it would be a good idea to invite guests so that they might understand more about the people of India.

Mr. Dutta expressed hopes of holding another function later this year. He also mentioned that the community of foreign students from India might want to organize formally.

Selection Season—

Choice of Queen Only Thing Consistent in U.S. Homecomings

Some places they put themselves into the running. On other campuses, mens' organizations sponsor them.

Here at Nebraska, junior Tassels become candidates.

The only consistent thing about Homecoming Queen selection across the nation's campuses is that there is a queen.

Whoops... even that isn't true. The University of San Francisco isn't having a homecoming this year.

"It just isn't feasible," said the president of the student governing body.

Variety Is Popular

But on most other campuses, this is the season of the big selection. Variety is the keynote of the selection processes as panels of judges compete with all-campus elections as the most popular mode of queen choosing.

The Daily Tar Heel of North Carolina University reports that the queen is chosen from a field of 28 candidates. Men's dorms and fraternities submit the candidates' names. The 10-member court is then chosen by five judges, one of whom is the wife of the University president.

The Queens Review is a distinctive feature of the University of Detroit method of selection. Candidates are sponsored by fraternities and other men's organizations. These candidates are then presented to the student body at a Queens Review, where they are all interviewed by an emcee.

Student voting then narrows the field to 10 candidates. From these 10 a special panel selects the queen.

Coeds File Entries
Los Angeles State College coeds file their own entries in the queen race. An all-student election then chooses the coed who will reign over Homecoming festivities.

At Arizona University, 10 contestants go before the polls in a narrowing election. Five candidates emerge from this election as finalists. These five then again find their names on a ballot. Students vote again for the queen.

All fraternities and organizations submit entrants at Georgia Institute of Technology. Twelve finalists are then chosen by the Bulldog club. From these 12 coeds, a panel consisting of a dean, the president of the Institute, the president of the national alumni association, the editor of the Atlanta Journal and the student editors of the two campus publications select the queen.

The student body at Kansas State is given a field of 17 candidates from which to vote on to chose the Homecoming Queen.

Sororities' Participation In AUF Events Put to Vote

Cancer Fought By Diagnosis, Publicity

This is the second article in the series, "Where Your Money Goes," concerning contributions collected by the All University Fund. The articles will explain each of the charities that AUF will donate to this year, and the various purposes the charity serves.

The American Cancer Society will receive 20 per cent of the money collected during the AUF drive.

The Cancer Society spreads facts about cancer, provides facilities for diagnosis and backs research in more than 100 laboratories and universities.

Pamphlet Distribution
Last year 400,000 educational pamphlets about cancer were distributed in Nebraska. The Society estimates that about one-third of all cancer deaths can be prevented through education and early diagnosis.

Twelve tumor clinics are maintained in Nebraska. Twenty-four thousand dollars of the money raised in Nebraska last year went directly to Nebraska institutions for research and clinical instruction.

Approximately 1,000 scientists are working in 152 hospitals, universities and laboratories supported by the American Cancer Society. Some 3,000 younger men and women are serving as technicians or being trained for larger responsibilities in the cancer field.

Large Death Count
The Society estimates that cancer strikes one person out of every five. Approximately 335,000 men and women in the United States have lost their lives because of the disease.

The All University Fund is also contributing to World University Service, LARC School, the Lincoln Community Chest, the Lancaster County Committee for Crippled Children and the Muscular Dystrophy Associations of America.

Decision on Auction, Solicitation Due Today

The fate of campus sororities' participation in the All University Fund auction and independent solicitation drive will be known today.

Results of a Monday night sorority vote on whether or not to continue their part in the auction and solicitation were to be handed in to the Panhellenic office by noon today.

Criticism of the events had been brought to the attention of Panhellenic. During the independent solicitation drive, teams of sorority girls contacted all independent students living in Lincoln at their homes to solicit money.

Sorority girls said they felt they had been doing more than their share of work for AUF, the only campus organization allowed to solicit student funds for charities.

Give Twice
The auction, an annual affair at which fraternity and sorority pledge classes were "sold" to one another to raise money for AUF, drew fire because sororities reportedly felt they were being forced to give to AUF twice, through their house and through raising money to participate in the auction.

Sororities also have complained that the auction discriminated against some pledge classes because the classes were "sold" for different prices.

In a special meeting last Thursday, sorority presidents voted 14-1 in a straw vote to do away with both the auction and solicitation drive.

Also discussed at the Thursday meeting was the possibility of giving to AUF through one panhellenic donation. However, no further action on this form of aid to AUF was taken.

Delay Asked
John Glynn, president of AUF, asked the Panhellenic delegates to delay the action till next year.

Admitting that he felt that some of the criticism was just, Glynn stated that Panhellenic had brought out many changes that should be made.

"But these two events raise about $4,000 for charity. The drive starts in two weeks; the auction will be held in five. With this short notice we'll have no way to take care of this deficit."

Glynn said that if the events were continued as planned this year, a new plan to raise money would be made for next year and submitted to Panhellenic for approval.

Fowles
At the Panhellenic meeting Monday, Franklin Fowles, assistant dean of Student Affairs, told the delegates that the houses and the administration were disturbed about the high number of downslips issued this fall.

Fowles described the many campus groups and special classes set up to promote and remedy the scholarship situation.

These include the Junior Division, the counseling service, a study skills course and a remedial reading program.
