

Alphabetical Registration To Be Used in January

Students will register for second semester classes Jan. 12-14 in alphabetical order rather than according to the number of hours passed. "This is an attempt to smooth out the registration bulges, such as having all Engineering and Business Administration seniors registering on Monday morning and all sophomore English, ROTC and Physical Education students on Tuesday afternoon," said Mrs. Irma Laase, assistant registrar.

She added that in the past some students have found ways to register earlier than their hours passed would allow them, and this plan would eliminate the use of Assignment Committee members as "policemen."

Space is usually planned to take care of all enrollments so students need not be greatly concerned about not being able to get into courses, Mrs. Laase said. Seniors who need certain courses to graduate are given consideration, and if students have a valid reason for needing a section at a particular hour special arrangements can be made, she said.

Class schedules for second semester are now available in the Registrar's Office, Administration 208, and on Ag-

Campus in Agricultural Hall 206. Undergraduate students are encouraged to make appointments now for seeing advisers, said Mrs. Laase.

Cards will be pulled with the help of the Assignment Committee in the Military and Naval Science Building drill floor from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Jan. 12 and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Jan. 13-14.

Committee Continues Advanced Card Pulls

Junior Division Students Advised To Complete Worksheets Early

Registration cards for Junior Division students will again be pulled by the Assignment Committee.

For the first time last fall, cards were pulled in advance for about a third of the entering Junior Division students who had indicated what courses they wished to take.

Worksheets were made by Junior Division and given to the Assignment Committee who pulled the cards.

Easier Registration

This plan worked very well and made the entire fall registration easier, said Mrs. Irma Laase, Assistant Registrar.

As a continuation of this experiment, this week all Junior Division students received instructions asking them to prepare a worksheet before seeing their adviser, to make notes on questions they wish to ask and to consult him at the appointed time.

Advisers send the worksheets to Junior Division which will give them to the Assignment Committee as they are received. Cards will be pulled in advance for all Junior Division students whose worksheets are received early.

Even Distribution

To be considered in the card pulling will be the necessity for even distribution of students throughout the several sections of a particular course and the distribution, as equally as possible, of each student's classes over the available hours of the week.

The "two-fifths" rule, requiring that this proportion of a student's classes be on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday mornings or on Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons will figure in the scheduling. Cards will also be pulled on the basis of "pattern" requirements of a student's particular course of study.

Class Card Package

These Junior Division students will pick up the package of class cards and will fill out registration forms when they pay fees.

The students should see their advisers between next Monday and Jan. 9.

"If this plan works well," said Mrs. Laase, "in time the Committee may be able to pull cards for all students who turn in worksheets by an early date."

Bulletin Exposes Habits Of Christmas Tree Buyers

Christmas tree buying habits of Nebraskans have been revealed in a bulletin just released by the University Agricultural Experiment Station.

The average consumer will have a Douglas-fir, five to six feet in height standing in his living room this holiday season. He will have purchased the tree by Dec. 15 and it will probably have come from Montana.

Entitled "How We Buy Christmas Trees in Nebraska," the bulletin is based on surveys in 1956-57 of consumers, retailers and wholesalers of Christmas trees in the state.

During the 1956 season, the trees were displayed in an estimated 260,000 households across the state, while an additional 42,000 trees were set up in churches, schools, businesses and other organizations.

Churches and schools provide the largest market for trees, excluding the family. Trees are also displayed by 28 percent of commercial concerns.

In selecting a tree, customers consider form the most important criterion, with density and color ranking next. Most households with children buy a living tree but only one-third of childless families purchase one.

Children as well as price also influence the size of trees. The more children, the larger the tree seems to hold true.
