

Ag Economist Foresees Increases in Food Costs

By BOB RAY
Ag News Editor

DR. OLSEN

What's the economic outlook for students graduating in 1963? If they're Ag college graduates, says Dr. Fred L. Olsen, Ag Extension economist, the outlook is good. Despite low-calorie diets, says Olsen, expenditures for food will increase both absolutely, and per-capita. New food products from de-hydrated foods to an electric sealing iron for home packaging of "boil-in-the-bag" foods are available in supermarkets. Not only have marketing ideas men proved a boon to the housewife's homecanning operations, they've even come up with "breadwinner's insurance."

By paying 79 cents a week on the grocery bill, a family is assured payment of three years food bills should the head of the family die.

The outlook for production entrepreneurs is good too. Crop prices will hold steady and freight rates and fertilizer prices are down, said Olsen; this means that feed grain prices will be stable.

And this, in turn, means that good managers of land, labor and capital could make money in farming and especially livestock, Olsen added.

What about the outlook for graduates who will wed in June and set up housekeeping?

Supply is catching up with demand on such durable goods as cars, TV's, bedroom suites and bungalows. But Nebraska: "Period of Adjustment," 1:00, 3:00, 5:00, 7:00, 8:55.

Stuart: "Kill or Cure," 1:10, 3:35, 5:20, 7:25, 9:25.

supply and price are still outrunning demand in such services as medical care, home maintenance, tourist service, rent and education.

It appears that the ideal situation is one where you earn your money in service work and spend it on durable goods.

If the graduate employment outlook is good, and the young married outlook is mixed, then the tax outlook is really confused.

At a three-day National Outlook Conference in Washington, D.C., held just after last November's elections, economists met bankers, heads of commerce and ambassadors to discuss taxes, and the economic outlook.

Delegates to the conference decided that, with the present labor force, the nation has at least six choices of tax policies:

- 1) Make no changes in taxes or government purchases.
- 2) Make no changes in government purchases, but lower taxes.

- 3) Make no changes in taxes, but increase government expenditures for schools, teachers, hospitals and roads.
- 4) Lower taxes and increase expenditures.
- 5) Increase both taxes and government expenditures.
- 6) Decrease both taxes and government expenditures.

Those are the choices with the present labor force. In a different labor situation, the tax outlook for the year might have six other answers.

NU Faculty Topic Will Be Unusual—Tissue Cells' Use

The use of tissue culture cells as hosts for the reproduction of mammalian viruses will be explained at the Faculty Round Table Monday at 8 p.m. in 232-4 Student Union.

George A. Young, professor of Veterinary Science, will present "Importance of the Part and the Whole."

Associate Professor John W. Weymouth of the Physics Department, chairman of the Faculty Round Table, said that the organization offers the professors at the University a chance to exchange ideas. He indicated that usually a professor addresses and writes for a narrow field but "here he can present his ideas to a wider group."

"University faculty members thrive on intellectual exchange of ideas," he said.

The discussion topics are selected by an elected committee from the organization. Speakers are usually from the University, but don't have to be. Weymouth said that the committee tries to select topics of controversial interest to produce discussion.

Some of the past topics have been "Liberal Education: Is it Possible?" presented by Royce H. Knapp, professor of Secondary Education; "Students View of Higher Education," presented by J. R. Warren, counseling psychologist and "Contacts and Conflicts between Literature and Science," by Reino Virtanen, professor of romance languages.
