VENDOR SCORES

OVATION FOR ICE CREAM MAN — Willard Grumert is possibly the only concession salesman ever to receive ovations from the spectators at a basketball game. "Willy" entertained and fascinated the crowds with his expert ice cream bar-tossing marmganship all year. He invariably hits his target often in the top row of the coliseum. The only problem now is to train the spectators so they can return their money with equal accuracy.

Students from all denominations attended the conference over Christmas holidays at Athens, Ohio. The conference is held every four years and is attended by students from all nations and races.

Married Students Wait

Only married students registered full time may qualify for residence. The waiting period is from a year to a year and a half. production of "Long Day's Journey Into Night," was the director of the recent laboratory production of "The Seventh Seal."

The tentative dates for the production are April 18 and 19, and the play is expected to require a seven-week rehearsal period.

Rich Mahood, technical coordinator of the experimental theater, will direct the show. He recently served as designer and technical director in the production of "The Darkeness Preceding," by Larry Dobbins, also an experimental performance.

Mahood divulged that any interested student may try out for either this production or that of "The Rivals," a play which the DAILY NEBRASKAN reported in last week.

"In some cases," said Mahood, "students may be able to try out for and get parts in both shows."

He explained that the try-out period for these two productions "is just a pre-tryout period now, to see what talent is going to be available."

He explained that the "official" tryouts for "The Rivals" are to be held after the University Theater's production of "Hamlet," whose dates are March 18 through the 21.

The last laboratory theater production is designated for May 29 and 30, with two other lab plays to be performed, the second three weeks before that, and the first three weeks previous to the second.

South Carolina Asks 75%-- Class Cuts Are Curbed

Students at the University of South Carolina cannot receive credit for classes in which their attendance is less than 75 per cent of the lectures, according to an announcement from Dean of Men L. Eugene Cooper printed in the student paper, the GAMECOCK.

Excuses for class absences must be secured from the dean of men or the dean of women within three days of the last day of absence and presented to the instructors within five days after that day.

Excuses are granted, according to Cooper, for serious diseases, marriage, birth, death or serious illness in the immediate family. Cooper defined "immediate family" as parents, sisters, brothers and anyone who has lived with the family for the past five years.

Excuses for the day before a vacation can be granted only when the student is hospitalized or an immediate relative dies.

Four unexcused absences, however are permitted. The GAMECOCK explained that these were to provide for "unexpected contingencies which will necessitate absence from class." "Unexpected contingencies" are car trouble, appearance in court, routine medical appointments, etc. Students who earned a perfect grade average the preceding semester for twelve hours or more of credit are not required to attend all lectures, but they must abide by the 75 per cent rule.

In addition to explaining the school's regulations on class cuts, Cooper outlined the policy on dropping courses. A student is allowed to drop a course within the first four weeks if he can get permission from his adviser, his instructor, the dean of his school and the dean of men or women.

Permission to drop a course will be permitted only when continuing would be detrimental to the student's health or for circumstances beyond a student's control.

I-State Regents Propose Student Tuition Increase

The Iowa State Board of Regents has proposed a raise in tuition at that institution and according to the IOWA STATE DAILY, student newspaper, this will hit the students where it hurts—in the pocket book.

"Rising costs will work a hardship on many students, says the Iowa State paper. "Out-of-state students will be harder hit than most Iowa residents, but some will be forced to drop out for periods of time."

Two out-of-state residents said simply that if the increase is passed, they would not return to Iowa State next fall. Another, a student from Illinois, said the change would not really affect him and that he was in favor of increasing the salaries of instructors. The increase, besides increasing salaries, will lend support to the Iowa Center project and give money to athletics.

Some students felt that they would be paying for benefits they would not receive. "Hiking the thing to pay for loses for the Center and for the jocks won't help my education," said one student.

Books Go On Display

The Lutheran Student House will run a special book display February 22 through March 15.

The theme to the selection of books will be "How many times can a man turn his head, pretending he just doesn't see..."

The theme was picked in the spirit of the German theologian, Dietrich Bonhoeffer, with his affirmation that Christ is the Lord of the world, according to a Student House spokesman.

Books will be on display from 8 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. and may be purchased or ordered at any time.

Texas Battles Over Method Of Selection

AUSTIN, Texas (CP)—For the second time in three years students at the University of Texas are headed towards a battle over the selection methods for choosing the editor of the student newspaper.

Last Thursday, the Texas Student Assembly sent three bills concerning the editorship to its campus affairs committee. An anticipated battle was avoided for the present by the action.

Each one of the three bills is a variation on direct election of the editor. One of the bills calls for the Texas Student Publications Board of Directors, which presently selects the editor, to propose to the Board of Regents that the editor be elected by the student body rather than being appointed by the Board.

A second bill proposes that results of a preferential poll be taken into consideration when the Board selects the editor.

The third bill proposes that a spring poll of the student body be taken and that the members of the Board be bound to vote for the person receiving the most votes in the poll.

Sam Kinch Jr., editor during 1962-63, who is now on the Assembly, raised several questions concerning the bills. Kinch questioned how student members of the Board could be bound to vote according to a poll and why the specification was not that the top vote-getter should have a majority rather than a plurality.

All of the bills contend that students have little voice in selection of the editor under the present process.

Busy Weekend Slows Romance On Campus

Cupid must have come down with a mid-winter cold; at least he wasn't as active as usual in the University campus. Only seven couples took steps of any kind, fatal or otherwise, over the weekend.
